PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE SIXTIETH CONGRESS.

FIRST SESSION.

SENATE.

The first Monday of December being the day prescribed by the Constitution of the United States for the annual meeting of Congress, the first session of the Sixtieth Congress commenced this day.

The Senate assembled in its Chamber at the Capitol.

The Vice-President (Mr. CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS) called the Senate to order at 12 o'clock noon.

PRAYER.

The Chaplain, Rev. EDWARD E. HALE, offered the following prayer:

O Lord, Thou art my God; I will exalt Thee; I will praise Thy name. We have a strong city. Salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. Open ye the gates that the righteous nation which keepeth truth may enter in. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed in Thee. Trust ye in the Lord forever, for in Him there is an everlasting rock. Thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth.

Even so, Father; and Thou wilt teach us. Thou wilt give us Thy counsel, that in righteousness and truth Thy servants may go forward to the duties of this winter, of this place, and of this land. They are here in Thy service—weak, but Thou art strong—listening that they may hear Thee. Inspirit them with Thine own Holy Spirit. Make them strong with Thine infinite strength, and lead them forward in hope, in faith, and in love as they seek here to be in service for other men.

Consecrate for us all, Father, the memories of the past, the memories of the faithful men whom we shall not see here again, that Thou hast lifted up to higher service. Quicken us all by showing us that what Thou dost in the world must be done by Thy children, that we may indeed consecrate life to Thy service in Christ, Jesus.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver from evil. For thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen.

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I present the credentials of Hon. ISAAC STEPHENSON, a Senator-elect from the State of Wisconsin, and ask that they be read and placed on file.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The credentials will be read.

The Secretary read the credentials of ISAAC STEPHENSON, chosen by the legislature of the State of Wisconsin a Senator from that State, to fill the vacancy in the unexpired term beginning March 4, 1903, caused by the resignation of John C. Spooner.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The credentials will be placed on file.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. President, I present the credentials of my colleague [Mr. BACON], who has been reelected for the term of six years. I ask that the credentials be read and properly filed.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I suggest that no business is in order until the roll has been called.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The presentation of credentials is in order under the uniform practice of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. Before the roll is called, or before we know that there is a quorum of the Senate present?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is presumed that a quorum is present, unless the question of a quorum is raised. The Secretary will read the credentials presented by the Senator from Georgia.

The credentials of AUGUSTUS OCTAVIUS BACON, chosen by the legislature of the State of Georgia a Senator from that State for the term beginning Mareh 4, 1907, were read and ordered to be filed.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATH TO SENATORS-ELECT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call, in alphabetical order, the names of Senators-elect whose credentials have been received and placed on file, and as their names are called in groups of four they will come forward and take the oath prescribed by law.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. BACON, Mr. BAILEY, Mr. BORAH, and Mr. BOURNE.

These Senators advanced to the Vice-President's desk, escorted by Mr. CLAY, Mr. CULBERSON, Mr. HEYBURN, and Mr. FULTON, respectively, and the oath was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. BRIGGS, Mr. BROWN, Mr. BURNHAM, and Mr. CRANE.

These Senators advanced to the Vice-President's desk, escorted by Mr. KEAN, Mr. BURKETT, Mr. GALLINGER, and Mr. LODGE, respectively, and the oath was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. CULLOM, Mr. CURTIS, Mr. DAVIS, and Mr. DIXON.

These Senators advanced to the Vice-President's desk, escorted by Mr. HOPKINS, Mr. LONG, Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas, and Mr. CARTER, respectively, and the oath was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. DOLLIVER, Mr. ELKINS, Mr. FOSTER, and Mr. FRYE.

These Senators were escorted by Mr. ALLISON, Mr. SCOTT, Mr. MCENERY, and Mr. HALE, respectively, to the Vice-President's desk, and the oath was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. GAMBLE, Mr. GUGGENHEIM, Mr. MCLAURIN, and Mr. MARTIN.

These Senators advanced to the Vice-President's desk, escorted by Mr. KITTREDGE, Mr. TELLER, Mr. MONEY, and Mr. DANIEL, respectively, and the oath was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. NELSON, Mr. PAYNTER, Mr. RICHARDSON, and Mr. SIMMONS.

These Senators were escorted to the Vice-President's desk by Mr. CLAPP, Mr. MCCREARY, Mr. DU PONT, and Mr. OVERMAN, respectively, and the oath administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. SMITH, Mr. STEPHENSON, Mr. TAYLOR, Mr. TILLMAN, and Mr. WARREN.

These Senators advanced to the Vice-President's desk, escorted by Mr. BURROWS, Mr. LA FOLLETTE, Mr. FRAZIER, Mr. LATIMER, and Mr. CLARK of Wyoming, respectively, and the oath was administered to them.

SENATORS PRESENT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. LODGE. Before that is done, Mr. President, I should like in justice to myself to explain why I sought to interrupt the proceedings a little while ago. In the short time I have been here I have never known a session of the Senate to meet without the first action being the calling of the roll for the purpose of determining the presence of a quorum. I also think it is necessary that the presence of Senators should be determined officially in order that they may receive their mileage.

I find in looking back that at the last session the first action was the calling of the roll to determine the presence of a quorum, as the Chair then stated, and the next day, December 5, the first entry is the following:

ALEXANDER S. CLAY, a Senator from the State of Georgia, and SAMUEL D. MCENERY, a Senator from the State of Louisiana, appeared.

That entry is always made to show that absent Senators subsequently appeared.

I did not raise the point of a quorum and interrupt the swearing in of Senators that was about to begin, but I desire to apologize to the Chair for seeming to interrupt the proceedings. It is because I always believed the first business in order was the calling of the roll that I was led to make the suggestion I did.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the practice suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts is as stated by him during a Congress following the first or special session, but that the practice at a session beginning a Congress, as this is, is in conformity with the suggestion of the Chair.

Mr. LODGE. I will ask the Chair if I am mistaken in supposing that on the 4th of December, 1905, the proceeding I have here, was the beginning of a new Congress, as this is the beginning of a new Congress.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair does not recall distinctly the proceeding to which the Senator refers, but understands that for many years the practice has been substantially the course pursued on the present occasion.

Mr. LODGE. The Clerk informs me that for a hundred years of the Senate it was not customary to call the roll at the beginning of a session. I think he is in error as to the earlier sessions of the Senate, but, however that may be, there is no question that for the last fourteen years, during which I have been in the Senate, the first business has been the calling of the roll. On the 4th of December, 1905, after the close of the Chaplain's prayer, the Vice-President said:

The Secretary will call the roll of the Senate.
The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names.

* * * * * * *

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Seventy-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is present.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, December 2, 1907.

This day, in compliance with the provisions of the Constitution, the Members-elect of the House of Representatives of the Sixtieth Congress assembled in their Hall and were called to order by Mr. ALEXANDER MCDOWELL, the Clerk of the last House.

The CLERK. Prayer will be offered by the Chaplain of the last House.

The following prayer was offered by the Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D., Chaplain of the last House:

O Thou eternal, invisible, yet ever-present God, our heavenly Father, from whom cometh all wisdom, power, and goodness, continue, we beseech Thee, thy ministrations unto us and help us to grow into all that makes men holy and thus into all that makes a nation pure and noble, wise and just, strong and great, to the honor and glory of Thy holy name.

We bless Thee for the unparalleled growth of our Republic, for its material, intellectual, moral, and spiritual progress. Yet we realize that with every advance toward the higher civilization come larger and more complicated problems to be solved. Imbue us plenteously with heavenly gifts, that we may solve them in accordance with Thy will.

We thank Thee for the Congress now convened, and we most fervently pray that however great and illustrious have been its predecessors it may rise superior to them all in the wisdom of its resolves and enactments. Inspire, therefore, the Representatives on the floor of this House with great thoughts, pure motives, and patriotic endeavors, that they may fulfill the obligations resting upon them.

Pour out Thy spirit abundantly upon its chosen Speaker, that he may guide with firm hand and clear vision through all its deliberations to the highest and best results. Impart unto the President of these United States, his advisers, and all others in authority wisdom from above, that the affairs of state may be wisely administered and the laws of the land faithfully executed, that peace and prosperity may prevail throughout our borders, that we may dwell in peace with all the world, now and always, in the spirit of Him who taught us when we pray to say:

Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen.

The CLERK. The result of the ballot is: Mr. CANNON receives 213 votes and Mr. WILLIAMS 162 votes. Mr. CANNON, having received a majority of all the votes cast, is elected Speaker of the Sixtieth Congress. [Applause.] The Clerk will appoint Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi, Mr. SULLOWAY of New Hampshire, and Mr. OLLIE M. JAMES of Kentucky, as a committee to escort the Speaker-elect to the Chair. [Applause.]

[When Mr. CANNON appeared with the committee designated, the Members of the House, rising in a body, greeted him with loud and general applause, which was renewed as he ascended to the chair.]

Mr. WILLIAMS. Fellow-Representatives, the second to the highest office in the United States, and therefore in the world, is the office of Speaker of the American House of Commons, the House of Representatives.

I have the honor, for the third time in my life, not to introduce, but to present, to a House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States the Hon. JOSEPH G. CANNON, of Illinois, as its Speaker. [Prolonged applause.]

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, we are to-day organizing the Sixtieth Congress, marking the one hundred and eighteenth milestone in the history of government by the people under the Constitution. Our predecessors in the years that are past have left to us an example of wisdom, moderation, and courage that has never failed to preserve the ideals and the interests of republican government in many crises, whether of peace or war, adversity or prosperity.

Each generation of statesmen has had its own peculiar problems and its own particular embarrassments. No problems of government ever recur in exactly the same aspects, and they may never be treated in exactly the same way. The formulas of action in one exigency may never be applied safely in another. Government, so far as it relates to courses of action, has no fixed precedents; and no veneration for those who have gone before justifies living men in approaching live problems with purpose or with vision circumscribed by the limitations of the past. But the fundamental principles of free government are eternal and unchanging, resting on the will and responsibilty of the people, and are put in action through the deliberations of conscientious and fearless representatives of that will. This House is the only institution under our Constitution where that will of the people may be expressed with a fair approximation to scientific accuracy. [Applause.]

Other departments of the Government have lofty and important functions, but to this House alone belongs the peculiar, the delicate, and the all-surpassing function of interpreting and putting in definite form the will of the people. This duty we must perform ourselves. The principles of the past may help us to the extent of showing us the points of the compass; but beyond that we must depend on our own wisdom, our own constancy, our own industry, and our own fidelity to duty.

So far as the duty of organizing this House shall devolve upon me, I shall endeavor to perform the duty in a way to justify the confidence which your selection implies and to promote the great purposes for which we are assembled; but the duties of the hour rest not alone on myself. They rest on each one of you individually; and on your integrity, wisdom, and conservatism the people are relying as well as on mine. I have a right to expect your cooperation, because such cooperation will be your duty. I hope also that as we go on I may have it because of my efforts to merit your confidence and good will. [Applause.]

I am now ready for the oath.

SWEARING IN THE SPEAKER.

Mr. BINGHAM, the Member longest in continuous service in the House, was named by the Clerk to administer the oath of office to the Speaker-elect; and the oath was accordingly administered.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS AND DELEGATES.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the roll by States and Territories, and Members and Delegates, as their names are called, will please come forward to the area in front of the Clerk's desk and take the prescribed oath of office.

The Speaker then administered the oath of office to the Members and Delegates presenting themselves.

Mr. BUTLER and Mr. COCKS of New York qualified by affirmation.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to inform the President of the United States that the House of Representatives has elected JOSEPH G. The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed the following committee: Mr. PAYNE, Mr. TAWNEY, and Mr. WILLIAMS.

DISTRIBUTION OF ROOMS IN HOUSE OFFICE BUILDING.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That a special committee of five be appointed by the Speaker to report to the House at an early date plans for the distribution of rooms in the House office building and the redistribution of rooms under the control of the House in the Capitol Building.

A report from such committee shall be in order at any time.

The resolution was agreed to.

In pursuance of the resolution, the Speaker appointed the following committee: Mr. MANN, Mr. GAINES of West Virginia, Mr. YOUNG, Mr. LLOYD, and Mr. ADAMSON.

RULES OF THE SIXTIETH CONGRESS.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the rules of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-ninth Congress be adopted as the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixtieth Congress, including the standing orders of March 8 and March 14, 1900 (relating to consideration of pension and claim bills on Fridays), which are hereby continued in force during the Sixtieth Congress.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield to the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. DALZELL. I will yield to the gentleman from Mississippi five minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, of course I have no desire to make a useless play to the galleries. I know, of course, that the resolution is going to pass, but I do not consider it consistent with the past record of this side of the House to permit it to pass without a protest. We are of the opinion, and have been for a long time, that entirely too much power is concentrated in the hands of the Speaker of the House, and without any party spirit at all, speaking only what I think is best for the country at large, believing if my party were in the majority I would still take that same view, I want to protest against the adoption of the rules in their present drastic form, without any opportunity to the Members of the House to propose amendments and without any opportunity for the House itself to pass upon proposed amendments. We will, of course, vote against the resolution.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin rose.

Mr. DALZELL. How much time does the gentleman from Wisconsin want?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Five minutes.

Mr. DALZELL. I will yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, like the gentleman from Mississippi, I have no desire to consume the time of the House in an argument against the adoption of these rules. It was impossible for me to be present at the caucus on Saturday night. I did not arrive in the city until that evening. If I had been at the caucus I would have opposed the adoption of this rule.

I agree with the gentleman from Mississippi that there is altogether too much power concentrated in the Speaker of the House of Representatives. [Applause on the Democratic side.] It is more power, gentlemen, than ought to be given to any man in any government that pretends to be republican in form and democratic in spirit. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, in saying this I do not wish to be understood as uttering a word by way of criticism of the very distinguished and honorable gentleman who has discharged the duties of Speaker of the past two Congresses with such great success. But, as the gentleman from Mississippi has just said he would oppose this if the House were Democratic, I oppose it not because it is a Republican House, but because the power given to the Speaker under these rules is unrepublican and undemocratic. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

To show that that is true, I call the attention of the House and candid listeners and readers everywhere to these facts: That the Speaker of the House of Representatives has the sole power of recognition of those who rise on the floor; he appoints all the committees, including all the chairmen; he appoints the Committee on Rules, which, in conjunction with the other rules, practically enables the Committee on Rules to dictate what legislation shall come before the House; he is himself ex officio the chairman of the Committee on Rules, and ever since I have been here there has never been a Speaker but who appointed two men with him of the majority party constituting the majority of the committee, who are with him in everything that comes before that committee.

Therefore the Speaker becomes practically the Committee on Rules. [Laughter on the Democratic side.] That was so in a Democratic House, gentlemen, when Mr. Speaker Crisp was here. [Laughter on the Republican side.] That has been so in a Republican House ever since.

Now, when the Committee on Rules reports a proposition, every man on the floor knows that the Speaker wants it adopted nine times out of ten, where it is of any importance, and we all know his power, which compels us to go into his room if we wish to ask to be recognized for unanimous consent. [Applause on the Democratic side.] We all know that we can not get a bill passed—every man on the floor does, Republican or Democratic—by unanimous consent unless the Member presenting it first goes to the private chamber of the Speaker and asks to be recognized. The Speaker does not have to give his reasons before the House for any objections he may have. He does not rise upon the floor, but in his private chamber he objects. I wish to say that the present Speaker of the House has always treated me with the utmost courtesy and kindness. A former Speaker of this House compelled me to go to his room at one time. I went there to present a bill which provided simply for the changing of the material which was to go into a public building and which had been recommended to him in a letter from the office of the Supervising Architect. I did not know that that letter had been written to him; I did not ask that it should be written to him. It was a voluntary letter and a voluntary suggestion upon the part of the Architect. I went to the Speaker's chamber. I had refused on a former occasion to do his bidding. When I went to his room he said, "I will see about that, come in again." I went in again. He did not ask me to sit down. He said, "I do not think I can do that; I do not want to do that; I can not allow that to come up." Not only that, but he compelled me to stand there, and when a perfect stranger came in, he sat him down in his seat and turned his back upon me. [Laughter].

A very important rule had previously come before the House of Representatives. That same Speaker had stopped me at the entrance there and put his hand upon my breast and said, "Mr. COOPER, you will oblige me very much by not opposing this rule." That rule related to the Pacific Railroad funding bill. I did oppose it. I was the only Republican of the minority of the committee that reported against the bill; the rule was modified, and for the first time in thirty years the Pacific Railroad people lost their bill.

That same Speaker refused practically to recognize me for four or five years for any purpose, and never when he could help it.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. May I have three minutes more?

Mr. BURLESON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be extended.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] has charge of the time.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes more to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, one more thing. That this is too much power ever to give to one man in the House of Representatives is demonstrated by this fact: If the Vice-President of the United States had a similar power, then the Vice-President would appoint all of the committees of the Senate. He would appoint the Committee on Rules of that body and have the sole power of recognition. So that the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Vice-President of the United States together could agree practically to allow or not to allow legislation to come up before either Chamber.

Of course it is said that the House can at any time bring up legislation, but gentlemen know that they have repeatedly heard said on this floor, not alone in the last Congress, but in other Congresses, "I do not like this proposition, but the Speaker wants it."

My position is this: That the leader of this House should be on the floor and not in the chair. I say as a matter of practical experience that the very distinguished and very able gentleman who has the chair could render his country greater service leading the Republicans upon the floor than he renders them as the Speaker of the House. I think if the distinguished gentleman from Maine, the parliamentary clerk, who now stands at the right hand of the Speaker, were elected Speaker to sit there simply as a presiding officer after the manner of the speaker of the House of Commons, and the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], who is now the Speaker of this House, were upon this floor leading us under a system of rules which would enable the House itself to elect a Committee on Rules, at the head of which would be the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], much better business would be done in the way of legislation on this floor.

I think it is also unfair to adopt the pending resolution, because there are about 100 new Members, and they have not seen the working of the rules and know little about them. But of course the caucus having adopted what it did adopt the other night, it does not become me to vote against the resolution. I may say that I can not consistently as a Republican—for I understand that the Republicans of the House by unanimous vote adopted this rule in caucus, and that the caucus was properly called, although I did not know it—I can not, as I say, consistently vote against the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. DE ARMOND rose.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield to the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. DALZELL. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I would like to know if I can not be recognized in my own right as a Member of the House of Representatives? [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri is informed by the Chair that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] is entitled to the floor, and at this time the gentleman from Pennsylvania is privileged to yield if the gentleman sees proper to do so and the gentleman from Missouri sees proper to accept the time.

Mr. DALZELL. I am willing to yield to the gentleman. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. DE ARMOND. About twenty minutes.

Mr. DALZELL. Oh, I can not yield that much.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I would be glad——

Mr. DALZELL. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr Speaker, I would be glad to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania to inform me and also inform the House what is there pressing that he can not spare that much time now?

Mr. DALZELL. I will yield the gentleman twenty minutes. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I listened a very short time ago, as I have no doubt the other Members of the House did, to the carefully worded and blandly sounding address from the Speaker-elect, in which, among other things, the Members of the House and the people of the country were told that here in this House is lodged the power of the people to make known their wishes and to execute their will. It sounded well; it was expressed handsomely. But a few minutes have elapsed since that performance, and now here, with time so precious that only a few minutes can be conceded to anybody to express an opinion upon the subject, it is proposed to tie and shackle the House by rules about which a good many know nothing and about which a good many others know a great deal. Talk about the people having here representation and about here the will and wish of the American people being executed, when here, at once, out of hand, blindly, without consideration, without reading the code of rules, designed, cunningly designed, to put the Representatives in this House, the membership of it, and the mighty interests of the people of this nation in the sacred keeping of the Speaker! What is the occasion for hurry? You are determined to adopt these rules. Why not at least have the grace and decency to permit a little discussion and give a little time for their consideration; for the work predestined, cut and dried, to be put through? Why not? [Applause on the Democratic side.] The greatest reform needed in this land is required here. The crying abuse of all abuses, against which the citizenship of this Republic protests and long has protested in vain, is the subversion of the rights of the individual Members of this body. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Here we stand under the Constitution as equals, each one of us commissioned by the sovereign citizens of his district to come here and represent that district and its interests, and as a patriotic American citizen, a Member of the Congress of the United States, to represent and to voice as best he can the interests and rights and promote as far as he can the welfare of the whole people of these United States, and yet the first formal act is to throttle and gag and bind the membership of this House—to make it subservient in fact, whether in deed some of you realize it or not, to the autocratic will of the Speaker.

Now, we have no rules. Here is a moment, here is a brief space of time—would to God it could be prolonged and enlarged—when there is some semblance of freedom, when there is something like equality upon this floor, and yet even in this hour within which this Congress has been assembled and organized, the period of sixty minutes, a man can not speak in opposition to this legislative outrage except by permission. He can not be recognized in his own right as an American citizen. He can not be recognized as a chosen Representative, charged with the duties and freighted with the responsibility of his position, unless it be with the permission of some other Member, who possesses no rights superior to his own. [Applause on the Democratic side.] For one, representing an independent constituency of unshackled men, men neither upon whose limbs nor spirits are the gyves of tyranny, I avail myself of even this poor permission, which I ought not to be forced to ask, and but for the necessities of the situation would not accept, to express my protest. I know it is vain now and here, but I have faith in the God who rules over the nation, and I have faith and confidence in the patriotism and manhood of American citizenship upon which to base the hope that the time is not far distant when such protests as this will cease to be necessary because the evils against which they are raised will have passed away. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Why the hurry for the adoption of this code of rules? Why do you wish to enslave yourselves and enslave us? Are you proposing to go back to your constituencies, as manly as they are independent American citizens, and when they ask you why you did not do this or why you suffered the doing of that, do you propose, as cowards and cravens, to defend yourselves and apologize upon the mere, miserable, mean pretext that these rules hampered you and controlled you and that you could not do anything else?

You can do something now. Now is the time of times for the American Representative to stand up proudly in the power and glory of his high office. [Applause on the Democratic side.] It is a high office. Upon the average, we represent here, or ought to be permitted to represent, if the Constitution were enforced and observed, and would then represent, on the average, about 200,000 American citizens. Not one, not an iota of the rights of the citizenship which I represent, of the citizenship of any district in this Union, North or South, East or West, Republican or Democratic, shall be cut away or frittered away or bargained away, in what amounts in effect, however you may gloss it and veneer it, to absolute surrender into abject slavery, without at least a feeble protest from me.

Why not refer the rules which you propose to a committee? Why not give opportunity for the consideration of proposed amendments? Why hasten pellmell into slavery? You will find these bonds galling. You will find the time coming when your manhood may long to break the shackles for the time being and intuitively assert itself when chafing under the bonds which you put upon it. Behold the spectacle! There are no rules here at all. And yet in this membership of three hundred and ninety-one, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the right hand of the Speaker—the man standing next to him upon the Committee on Rules, echoing his every wish, voicing his every sentiment, and voting to carry out his every purpose—is recognized here upon this floor, and no man is to be given permission even to say a solitary word in criticism or in opposition unless the gentleman from Pennsylvania kindly and generously concedes to him a little modicum of time! [Applause on the Democratic side.] I know well that if the gentleman from Pennsylvania pursues the course which I presume he will pursue, and which has been followed heretofore, he will avail himself of the opportunity to move the previous question, cutting off all debate.

But for that I would scorn, under these circumstances and at this stage of proceedings, to accept a minute or second of time within his control, but would insist upon my right to time as a Representative from the Sixth district of Missouri. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I know full well that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] before an hour shall have expired may be expected to move the previous question, and if we are to judge of what is to happen by what has happened repeatedly in the House, a partisan majority behind him will sustain that resolution to cut off debate and come to an immediate vote, so that the man who says anything—and it must be said hurriedly and under adverse circumstances—must say it by reason of the gracious permission accorded to him under the kind ministration of the Speaker by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL].

If there were not another man in the House to oppose this procedure, as to its form and its substance, I would do it. I would glory in doing it alone. I would be proud to do it at some length in my own time, and really as an unshackled Representative of a people entirely free themselves in heart and soul from the touch and tinge and debasement of slavery. [Applause on the Democratic side.] As it is, I avail myself of the poor opportunity that is so graciously extended.

Adopt your rules, if you will, but note this, and have warning of it now, that there are some here who will not be tamely tied, and who in the days to come, who in the legislative history of this Congress, will avail themselves, as occasion may offer—and it is not to offer very frequently—of the little opportunity that it is beyond your power to take from them, and that we shall appeal beyond this tyrannous decision, beyond this surrender, this humiliating surrender, of the rights of the American Representative. We shall appeal over your head, shall appeal through your rules, shall appeal in the mighty right of the American Representative of the mighty sovereign, the American citizen. And we shall hope that the time is not far distant when those who are chosen to represent free men in the greatest legislative body, as we frequently hear, upon the face of the earth shall stand forth panoplied in the glory of a noble trust, possessed of the powers of the real Representative, not by permission of anybody, responsible alone to his God above him and to his constituents behind him. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I can not conceive of anything more unnecessary than a discussion of the rules that are now offered for adoption at this day. They have been discussed time and again in this House and elsewhere—in the magazines, in the newspapers—and they have been vindicated by their results. Prior to the Fifty-first Congress the rules of the House of Representatives had remained for a great number of years unchanged. These, our rules, are an evolution. Rule after rule has gone upon the book in answer to some present emergency. The rules that prevailed prior to the Fifty-first Congress were so constructed as to place all the power of the House in the hands of the minority. In that Congress, which was presided over by that great Speaker and illustrious statesman, Thomas B. Reed [loud applause on the Republican side], the rules were amended by a committee consisting of William McKinley, JOSEPH G. CANNON, and J. G. Carlisle. [Applause.] Of the rules then on the book but a very few met with any change. The only substantial changes that were made were those with respect to counting a quorum, which placed in the hands of the majority—where it belongs—the power of this body, those that related to the order of business, and that rule which provided that 100 should constitute a quorum in the Committee of the Whole. With these exceptions the rules that you are asked to adopt are substantially the rules that have been in force, with their additions from time to time, since the foundation of the Government.

Now, these rules are not only the rules of the Fifty-ninth Congress; they are not only the rules of the Fifty-first Congress, both of which were Republican Congresses, but they are substantially the rules of the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses—Democratic Congresses, presided over by a Democratic Speaker. [Applause on the Republican side.]

So far as the power of the Committee on Rules is concerned, it received its impetus and the power it now possesses under the régime of your Democratic Speaker, Mr. Charles Crisp. So far as the power of the Speaker is concerned, it is to-day as it has been for a hundred years. It has been his power for a hundred years to recognize or to fail to give recognition. It has been his power for a hundred years to appoint the committees of this House; and it is nothing new now to find some Member who has been disappointed in his recognition by the Speaker for the purpose of passing some measure that the Speaker thought ought not to pass to get up on this floor and denounce the power of the Speaker. I do not know what took place between the gentleman from Wisconsin and the gentleman who is now unable to give his side of the story, because he has passed beyond.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. DALZELL. I will.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I took that matter over to the Senate, had it put in in the Senate, and it became law. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. DALZELL. I am not caring where you put it. I am calling the attention of the House now to the fact that the gentleman from Wisconsin has a grievance which arose out of an interview the other side of which it is absolutely impossible for this House at this day to know, because the other party to the interview has passed beyond; and it is not an unusual thing for a man with a grievance to get up on the floor of this House and denounce the power of the Speaker—that power which, as I say, has existed as it exists to-day for a hundred years.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this side of the House, the majority, is charged with the responsibility for legislation. This side, thus charged with the responsibility, has the right to prescribe the rules under which legislation shall be had. It is no secret at all that in the caucus of the Republican Members of the House these rules were directed to be adopted, as they have been in every Congress since the Fifty-first; and as I said a few moments ago, in the outset, they are vindicated and their wisdom has been proved by some of the best legislation in the history of the Republic now on the statute books, put there by virtue of these rules, and some of the best legislation in the future is likely to be put on the statute books by virtue of these same rules. Lest my friend from Missouri should be disappointed, I now ask the previous question. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania for a moment withhold the demand for the previous question?

Mr. DALZELL. Certainly.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to add that the rules as yet have not been adopted, and we are proceeding under general parliamentary usage, the gentleman from Pennsylvania having the floor. When the gentleman from Pennsylvania yields the floor, if he does yield it, then any other gentleman is entitled to the floor. Holding the floor, the gentleman indicated that he would yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Missouri. The Chair took that to be in substance notice to the geptleman from Missouri that, yielding to him, he still holds the floor, that he might move the previous question on resuming the floor. That is the effect, as the Chair understands it, of the gentleman yielding to the gentleman from Wisconsin, and also to the gentleman from Missouri, under general parliamentary usages.

Now, the Chair may be indulged one moment further. The Chair, the Speaker of the House, is a Member of the House the same as any other Member. Unanimous consent being asked, it would not be granted should any Member object. The usage in many Congresses in the past was that the Chair would submit the request to the House; and it is an open secret to gentlemen who have served in some of the former Congresses that the Chair, keeping track of the business of the House as the Speaker and at the same time exercising his right as a Member, would often indicate to some Member upon the floor, by messenger or otherwise, that he desired an objection to be made. The Chair has seen that frequently occur under both Democratic and Republican Speakers. The present occupant of the chair, ever since he has occupied that position, has thought the better way and the more manly and fairer way was to exercise his right as a Member to object to a request for unanimous consent. Therefore the practice has grown up that gentlemen see the Speaker, and if he has objections then he invariably says that it is useless to recognize the Member for unanimous consent, because if nobody else objected the Chair in his capacity as a Member of the House would object. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Under the rules, if adopted, the Chair begs to call the attention of the gentlemen to the fact that the right of a Member to be recognized can in most instances not be denied by the Chair. There are a large number of motions which are privileged in their nature, and a question of privilege, first, and a privileged motion, second, halts all business before the House, and the Chair has no discretion. Gentlemen who have had service in the House will recollect that those motions are many.

The Chair desires to state again that the Speaker of the House is the servant of the House, and it is in the power of the House of Representatives as a question of the highest privilege to at any time elect a successor to any Member of that body who may be holding this place. One further observation. When special orders or special rules are suggested, as they have been under all Administrations, Democratic and Republican, at least for twenty years, those orders or rules can not be vitalized until a majority of the House has adopted them under the Constitution and the rules of the House.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the previous question be ordered.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I would submit a parliamentary inquiry, if I may be indulged.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DE ARMOND. That is, whether or not the Speaker will permit the House to act upon propositions and dispose of measures when a majority of the House requests him to do so.

The SPEAKER. When the majority acts under the Constitution and the laws no Speaker would dare to fail to obey the will of the majority. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. DE ARMOND. The gentleman rises for the purpose of getting an answer to his parliamentary inquiry, and for the purpose of putting another question.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman is not answered, it is the misfortune of the Chair or the misfortune of the peculiar state of mind of the gentleman. The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves the previous question.

Mr. DE ARMOND. But, Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit this parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DE ARMOND. I wish to state that it is not the misfortune of any peculiar state of mind on the part of the gentleman from Missouri who submitted the inquiry. In times past a majority have made a request for the consideration of this or that measure, and consideration has been denied. What I am asking now is whether or not if a majority of the membership of this House requests the Speaker to permit action upon a particular matter, he will or will not do it—and it is not necessary to refer to the Constitution in making the answer. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair, so far as the Chair knows or has any knowledge, desires to say to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND] that in the knowledge and belief of the Chair the gentleman is mistaken. The will of the majority always, for thirty-four years to my knowledge, has been law unto the Speaker.

Mr. WILLIAMS rose.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I insist on the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania demands the previous question.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Pennsylvania will yield for just a parliamentary inquiry——

Mr. DALZELL. I can not yield any further, Mr. Speaker. I demand the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I think we better have the yeas and nays. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken, and there were—yeas 199, nays 164, answering "present" 3, not voting 22, as follows:

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. DALZELL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and that the Senate is ready to proceed to business.

Also:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of two Senators be appointed to join such committee as may be appointed by the House of Representatives to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that a quorum of each House is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

And that in compliance with the foregoing the Vice-President had appointed as said committee Mr. ALLISON and Mr. TELLER.

Also:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard, with profound sorrow, of the death of the Hon. JOHN T. MORGAN, late a Senator from the State of Alabama.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate a copy of these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Also:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard, with deep regret, of the death of the Hon. EDMUND W. PETTUS, late a Senator from the State of Alabama.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate a copy of these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Senators whose deaths have just been announced, the Senate do now adjourn.

HOUR OF MEETING.

Mr. NEEDHAM. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California offers the resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That until otherwise ordered the daily hour of meeting of the House of Representatives shall be 12 o'clock meridian.

The question was taken, and the resolution was adopted.

PRINTING OF DIGEST AND MANUAL.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed 2,000 copies of the Digest and Manual of the rules and practice of the House of Representatives for the first session of the Sixtieth Congress, the same to be bound and distributed under the direction of the Speaker and Clerk of the House.

The question was taken, and the resolution was adopted.

DRAWING OF SEATS.

Mr. SHERMAN and Mr. HEPBURN rose.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Iowa rise?

Mr. HEPBURN. I rose for the purpose of introducing a resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Iowa probably his resolution is not in order until after the seats are drawn. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Iowa later. The gentleman from New York offers the resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House do now proceed to draw seats for Members and Delegates of the present Congress, in pursuance of Rule XXXII, and when names of Members absent from the city or on account of sickness are called that seats be selected by their colleagues.

Mr. OLMSTED. Mr. Speaker, pending the consideration of that resolution, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM], the father of the House; the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER], an ex-Speaker of the House; the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], the minority leader, and, upon our side, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] be permitted to select their seats before any drawing is made.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLMSTED] asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM], the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER], and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] be permitted to select their seats before the names of the Members are called. Is there objection?

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to offer any objection, but there is a very old Member of the House in the point of service on this side, who, I think, ought to be embraced in that motion. There has been a hiatus in his service, however. He was here many years ago, and I would like the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLMSTED] to include in that list the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SHERWOOD].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. OLMSTED. I have no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], the leader of the minority, if we might agree upon the first aisle beyond the center aisle as the divisional line between the two parties? [Cries of "No!"]

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, what the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] now submits to me was agreed to by that side in the Fifty-second Congress, because the Democratic majority was so immense, and by this side in the last Congress, because the Republican majority was so immense. But with those exceptions it has never been agreed to. The Republican majority in the last Congress, one hundred and thirty-odd, has been cut down to 55 in this Congress. The Democratic membership of this Congress will, with the addition of two Members, precisely fill the space from the center aisle back to the aisle second from the wall yonder, leaving what is called the "strip" upon that side. It has been the universal custom of the House when that was the case, or anything approximating it, for the majority party after filling all that side of the central aisle to take the "strip" over there. As I have stated, we lack two men of having enough to fill up to that aisle, and when you take for the Republican membership up to the second aisle over yonder, they will occupy all of it and will occupy two spaces on this side. For the reason submitted I can not agree to that, and I suggest that the Democrats take the seats beginning at the center aisle and going back to the aisle second from the wall on that side.

Mr. SHERMAN. I assume that the gentleman voices the sentiment of his party, so I will not make the suggestion in the shape of a formal request.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

DRAWING OF SEATS.

1. At the commencement of each Congress, immediately after the Members and Delegates are sworn in, the Clerk shall place in a box, prepared for that purpose, a number of small balls, of marble or other material, equal to the number of Members and Delegates, which balls shall be consecutively numbered and thoroughly intermingled, and at such hour as shall be fixed by the House for that purpose, by the hands of a page, draw said balls one by one from the box and announce the number as it is drawn, upon which announcement the Member or Delegate whose name on a numbered alphabetical list shall correspond with the number on the ball shall advance and choose his seat for the term for which he is elected.

2. Before said drawing shall commence each seat shall be vacated and so remain until selected under this rule, and any seat having been selected shall be deemed forfeited if left unoccupied before the call of the roll is finished; and whenever the seats of Members and Delegates shall have been drawn, no proposition for a second drawing shall be in order during that Congress.

The drawing of seats was proceeded with and concluded.

JOHN T. CHANCEY.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I have been directed by the Republican Members of this House to offer the following resolution, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be now considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHERMAN). The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That John T. Chancey be continued in the service of the House in his present position during the Sixtieth Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. TAWNEY rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman from Minnesota rise?

Mr. TAWNEY. To make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TAWNEY. Does this carry the same compensation that the gentleman is now receiving?

Mr. HEPBURN. I presume it does. I would state that it is the exact language of the resolution under which the gentleman now serves.

Mr. MANN. The compensation, as the gentleman from Illinois, my colleague, remarked, ought to be increased.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

SPECIAL EMPLOYEES.

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I will ask to have read to the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That during the Sixtieth Congress and until the organization of the Sixty-first Congress Robt. E. Cowart, jr., be authorized to act as special employee of the House of Representatives, and receive compensation at the rate of $1,500 per annum; that Felton B. Knight and Jos. J. Sinnott be authorized to act as special messengers of the House of Representatives, each to receive a compensation at the rate of $1,400 per annum, and that Paul D. Porter be authorized to act as special chief page of the House of Representatives, at the rate of $900 per annum and $700 additional for services as pair clerk.

Said officers shall at all times be under the direction and control of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and they shall be subject to removal for cause at any time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question was taken, and the resolution was adopted.

DEATH OF SENATORS MORGAN AND PETTUS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, it is my painful duty to announce the death of the two distinguished Senators of the United States from Alabama, the Hon. JOHN TYLER MORGAN and the Hon. EDMUND WINSTON PETTUS. On a later day I shall ask the House to set aside a day in which suitable encomiums on the great work of these eminent statesmen may be paid. I now desire to offer the following resolutions, which I send to the Clerk's desk, and move their adoption.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House of Representatives has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. JOHN TYLER MORGAN and Hon. EDMUND WINSTON PETTUS, Senators of the United States from the State of Alabama.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate, and send a copy thereof to the families of the deceased.

The question was taken, and the resolutions were unanimously adopted.

DEATH OF HON. CAMPBELL SLEMP.

Mr. JONES of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, it is with the deepest regret that I announce the death of my colleague, the Hon. CAMPBELL SLEMP, which occurred very suddenly at his home in Big Stone Gap on the morning of October the 13th last. At some future time I shall ask the House to set apart a day when Members may be afforded the opportunity to pay tribute to his life, character, and public services.

DEATH OF HON. GEORGE W. SMITH.

Mr. RODENBERG. Mr. Speaker, it is with a feeling of sincere sorrow and regret I announce to the House the death of my colleague, the Hon. GEORGE W. SMITH, which occurred at his home at Murphysboro late on Saturday, November 30. Mr. SMITH had been a Member of this body eighteen years and was just entering upon his tenth successive term when the final summons came. At some future time I shall ask that a day may be fixed when tribute may be paid to the life, character, and public services of this distinguished son of Illinois.

I now offer the following resolutions, which I ask to have read:

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. GEORGE W. SMITH, a Representative from the State of Illinois.

Resolved, That a committee of fifteen Members of the House, with such members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The question was taken, and the resolutions were unanimously adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the temporary occupant of the chair will announce the committee provided for in the resolution. The Chair hears no objection, and the Clerk will announce the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

*Committee to attend funeral of Hon. George W. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the annual message of the President of the United States, which the Secretary will read.

The Secretary (Mr. CHARLES G. BENNETT) read the message, as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

No nation has greater resources than ours, and I think it can be truthfully said that the citizens of no nation possess greater energy and industrial ability. In no nation are the fundamental business conditions sounder than in ours at this very moment; and it is foolish, when such is the case, for people to hoard money instead of keeping it in sound banks; for it is such hoarding that is the immediate occasion of money stringency. Moreover, as a rule, the business of our people is conducted with honesty and probity, and this applies alike to farms and factories, to railroads and banks, to all our legitimate commercial enterprises.

In any large body of men, however, there are certain to be some who are dishonest, and if the conditions are such that these men prosper or commit their misdeeds with impunity, their example is a very evil thing for the community. Where these men are business men of great sagacity and of temperament both unscrupulous and reckless, and where the conditions are such that they act without supervision or control and at first without effective check from public opinion, they delude many innocent people into making investments or embarking in kinds of business that are really unsound. When the misdeeds of these successfully dishonest men are discovered, suffering comes not only upon them, but upon the innocent men whom they have misled. It is a painful awakening, whenever it occurs; and, naturally, when it does occur those who suffer are apt to forget that the longer it was deferred the more painful it would be. In the effort to punish the guilty it is both wise and proper to endeavor so far as possible to minimize the distress of those who have been misled by the guilty. Yet it is not possible to refrain because of such distress from striving to put an end to the misdeeds that are the ultimate causes of the suffering, and, as a means to this end, where possible to punish those responsible for them. There may be honest differences of opinion as to many governmental policies; but surely there can be no such differences as to need of unflinching perseverance in the war against successful dishonesty.

In my Message to the Congress on December 5, 1905, I said:

"If the folly of man mars the general well-being, then those who are innocent of the folly will have to pay part of the penalty incurred by those who are guilty of the folly. A panic brought on by the speculative folly of part of the business community would hurt the whole business community; but such stoppage of welfare, though it might be severe, would not be lasting. In the long run, the one vital factor in the permanent prosperity of the country is the high individual character of the average American worker, the average American citizen, no matter whether his work be mental or manual, whether he be farmer or wage-worker, business man or professional man.

"In our industrial and social system the interests of all men are so closely intertwined that in the immense majority of cases a straight-dealing man, who by his efficiency, by his ingenuity and industry, benefits himself, must also benefit others. Normally, the man of great productive capacity who becomes rich by guiding the labor of many other men does so by enabling them to produce more than they could produce without his guidance; and both he and they share in the benefit, which comes also to the public at large. The superficial fact that the sharing may be unequal must never blind us to the underlying fact that there is this sharing, and that the benefit comes in some degree to each man concerned. Normally, the wage-worker, the man of small means, and the average consumer, as well as the average producer, are all alike helped by making conditions such that the man of exceptional business ability receives an exceptional reward for his ability. Something can be done by legislation to help the general prosperity; but no such help of a permanently beneficial character can be given to the less able and less fortunate save as the results of a policy which shall inure to the advantage of all industrious and efficient people who act decently; and this is only another way of saying that any benefit which comes to the less able and less fortunate must of necessity come even more to the more able and more fortunate. If, therefore, the less fortunate man is moved by envy of his more fortunate brother to strike at the conditions under which they have both, though unequally, prospered, the result will assuredly be that while damage may come to the one struck at, it will visit with an even heavier load the one who strikes the blow. Taken as a whole, we must all go up or go down together.

"Yet, while not merely admitting, but insisting upon this, it is also true that where there is no governmental restraint or supervision some of the exceptional men use their energies, not in ways that are for the common good, but in ways which tell against this common good. The fortunes amassed through corporate organization are now so large, and vest such power in those that wield them, as to make it a matter of necessity to give to the sovereign—that is, to the Government, which represents the people as a whole—some effective power of supervision over their corporate use. In order to insure a healthy social and industrial life, every big corporation should be held responsible by, and be accountable to, some sovereign strong enough to control its conduct. I am in no sense hostile to corporations. This is an age of combination, and any effort to prevent all combination will be not only useless, but in the end vicious, because of the contempt for law which the failure to enforce law inevitably produces. We should, moreover, recognize in cordial and ample fashion the immense good effected by corporate agencies in a country such as ours, and the wealth of intellect, energy, and fidelity devoted to their service, and therefore normally to the service of the public, by their officers and directors. The corporation has come to stay, just as the trade union has come to stay. Each can do and has done great good. Each should be favored so long as it does good. But each should be sharply checked where it acts against law and justice.

"* * * The makers of our National Constitution provided especially that the regulation of interstate commerce should come within the sphere of the General Government. The arguments in favor of their taking this stand were even then overwhelming. But they are far stronger to-day, in view of the enormous development of great business agencies, usually corporate in form. Experience has shown conclusively that it is useless to try to get any adequate regulation and supervision of these great corporations by State action. Such regulation and supervision can only be effectively exercised by a sovereign whose jurisdiction is coextensive with the field of work of the corporations—that is, by the National Government. I believe that this regulation and supervision can be obtained by the enactment of law by the Congress. * * * Our steady aim should be by legislation, cautiously and carefully undertaken, but resolutely persevered in, to assert the sovereignty of the National Government by affirmative action.

"This is only in form an innovation. In substance it is merely a restoration; for from the earliest time such regulation of industrial activities has been recognized in the action of the lawmaking bodies; and all that I propose is to meet the changed conditions in such manner as will prevent the Commonwealth abdicating the power it has always possessed, not only in this country, but also in England before and since this country became a separate nation.

"It has been a misfortune that the National laws on this subject have hitherto been of a negative or prohibitive rather than an affirmative kind, and still more that they have in part sought to prohibit what could not be effectively prohibited, and have in part in their prohibitions confounded what should be allowed and what should not be allowed. It is generally useless to try to prohibit all restraint on competition, whether this restraint be reasonable or unreasonable; and where it is not useless it is generally hurtful. * * * The successful prosecution of one device to evade the law immediately develops another device to accomplish the same purpose. What is needed is not sweeping prohibition of every arrangement, good or bad, which may tend to restrict competition, but such adequate supervision and regulation as will prevent any restriction of competition from being to the detriment of the public, as well as such supervision and regulation as will prevent other abuses in no way connected with restriction of competition."

I have called your attention in these quotations to what I have already said because I am satisfied that it is the duty of the National Government to embody in action the principles thus expressed.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

No small part of the trouble that we have comes from carrying to an extreme the national virtue of self-reliance, independence in initiative and action. It is wise to conserve this virtue and to provide for its fullest exercise, compatible with seeing that liberty does not become a liberty to wrong others. Unfortunately, this is the kind of liberty that the lack of all effective regulation inevitably breeds. The founders of the Constitution provided that the National Government should have complete and sole control of interstate commerce. There was then practically no interstate business save such as was conducted by water, and this the National Government at once proceeded to regulate in thoroughgoing and effective fashion. Conditions have now so wholly changed that the interstate commerce by water is insignificant compared with the amount that goes by land, and almost all big business concerns are now engaged in interstate commerce. As a result, it can be but partially and imperfectly controlled or regulated by the action of any one of the several States; such action inevitably tending to be either too drastic or else too lax, and in either case ineffective for purposes of justice. Only the National Government can in thoroughgoing fashion exercise the needed control. This does not mean that there should be any extension of Federal authority, for such authority already exists under the Constitution in amplest and most far-reaching form; but it does mean that there should be an extension of Federal activity. This is not advocating centralization. It is merely looking facts in the face, and realizing that centralization in business has already come and can not be avoided or undone, and that the public at large can only protect itself from certain evil effects of this business centralization by providing better methods for the exercise of control through the authority already centralized in the National Government by the Constitution itself. There must be no halt in the healthy constructive course of action which this Nation has elected to pursue, and has steadily pursued, during the last six years, as shown both in the legislation of the Congress and the administration of the law by the Department of Justice. The most vital need is in connection with the railroads. As to these, in my judgment there should now be either a national incorporation act or a law licensing railway companies to engage in interstate commerce upon certain conditions. The law should be so framed as to give to the Interstate Commerce Commission power to pass upon the future issue of securities, while ample means should be provided to enable the Commission, whenever in its judgment it is necessary, to make a physical valuation of any railroad. As I stated in my Message to the Congress a year ago, railroads should be given power to enter into agreements, subject to these agreements being made public in minute detail and to the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission being first obtained. Until the National Government assumes proper control of interstate commerce, in the exercise of the authority it already possesses, it will be impossible either to give to or to get from the railroads full justice. The railroads and all other great corporations will do well to recognize that this control must come; the only question is as to what governmental body can most wisely exercise it. The courts will determine the limits within which the Federal authority can exercise it, and there will still remain ample work within each State for the railway commission of that State; and the National Interstate Commerce Commission will work in harmony with the several State commissions, each within its own province, to achieve the desired end.

SHERMAN ANTITRUST LAW.

Moreover, in my judgment there should be additional legislation looking to the proper control of the great business concerns engaged in interstate business, this control to be exercised for their own benefit and prosperity no less than for the protection of investors and of the general public. As I have repeatedly said in Messages to the Congress and elsewhere, experience has definitely shown not merely the unwisdom but the futility of endeavoring to put a stop to all business combinations. Modern industrial conditions are such that combination is not only necessary but inevitable. It is so in the world of business just as it is so in the world of labor, and it is as idle to desire to put an end to all corporations, to all big combinations of capital, as to desire to put an end to combinations of labor. Corporation and labor union alike have come to stay. Each if properly managed is a source of good and not evil. Whenever in either there is evil, it should be promptly held to account; but it should receive hearty encouragement so long as it is properly managed. It is profoundly immoral to put or keep on the statute books a law, nominally in the interest of public morality, that really puts a premium upon public immorality, by undertaking to forbid honest men from doing what must be done under modern business conditions, so that the law itself provides that its own infraction must be the condition precedent upon business success. To aim at the accomplishment of too much usually means the accomplishment of too little, and often the doing of positive damage. In my Message to the Congress a year ago, in speaking of the antitrust laws, I said:

"The actual working of our laws has shown that the effort to prohibit all combination, good or bad, is noxious where it is not ineffective. Combination of capital, like combination of labor, is a necessary element in our present industrial system. It is not possible completely to prevent it; and if it were possible, such complete prevention would do damage to the body politic. What we need is not vainly to try to prevent all combination, but to secure such rigorous and adequate control and supervision of the combinations as to prevent their injuring the public, or existing in such forms as inevitably to threaten injury. * * * It is unfortunate that our present laws should forbid all combinations instead of sharply discriminating between those combinations which do good and those combinations which do evil. * * * Often railroads would like to combine for the purpose of preventing a big shipper from maintaining improper advantages at the expense of small shippers and of the general public. Such a combination, instead of being forbidden by law, should be favored. * * * It is a public evil to have on the statute books a law incapable of full enforcement, because both judges and juries realize that its full enforcement would destroy the business of the country; for the result is to make decent men violators of the law against their will, and to put a premium on the behavior of the willful wrongdoers. Such a result in turn tends to throw the decent man and the willful wrongdoer into closer association, and in the end to drag down the former to the latter's level; for the man who becomes a lawbreaker in one way unhappily tends to lose all respect for law and to be willing to break it in many ways. No more scathing condemnation could be visited upon a law than is contained in the words of the Interstate Commerce Commission when, in commenting upon the fact that the numerous joint traffic associations do technically violate the law, they say: 'The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Trans-Missouri case and the Joint Traffic Association case has produced no practical effect upon the railway operations of the country. Such associations, in fact, exist now as they did before these decisions, and with the same general effect. In justice to all parties, we ought probably to add that it is difficult to see how our interstate railways could be operated with due regard to the interest of the shipper and the railway without concerted action of the kind afforded through these associations.'

"This means that the law as construed by the Supreme Court is such that the business of the country can not be conducted without breaking it."

As I have elsewhere said:

"All this is substantially what I have said over and over again. Surely it ought not to be necessary to say that it in no shape or way represents any hostility to corporations as such. On the contrary, it means a frank recognition of the fact that combinations of capital, like combinations of labor, are a natural result of modern conditions and of our National development. As far as in my ability lies my endeavor is and will be to prevent abuse of power by either and to favor both so long as they do well. The aim of the National Government is quite as much to favor and protect honest corporations, honest business men of wealth, as to bring to justice those individuals and corporations representing dishonest methods. Most certainly there will be no relaxation by the Government authorities in the effort to get at any great railroad wrecker—any man who by clever swindling devices robs investors, oppresses wage-workers, and does injustice to the general public. But any such move as this is in the interest of honest railway operators, of honest corporations, and of those who, when they invest their small savings in stocks and bonds, wish to be assured that these will represent money honestly expended for legitimate business purposes. To confer upon the National Government the power for which I ask would be a check upon overcapitalization and upon the clever gamblers who benefit by overcapitalization. But it alone would mean an increase in the value, an increase in the safety of the stocks and bonds of law-abiding, honestly managed railroads, and would render it far easier to market securities. I believe in proper publicity. There has been complaint of some of the investigations recently carried on, but those who complain should put the blame where it belongs—upon the misdeeds which are done in darkness and not upon the investigations which brought them to light. The Administration is responsible for turning on the light, but it is not responsible for what the light showed. I ask for full power to be given the Federal Government, because no single State can by legislation effectually cope with these powerful corporations engaged in interstate commerce, and, while doing them full justice, exact from them in return full justice to others. The conditions of railroad activity, the conditions of our immense interstate commerce, are such as to make the Central Government alone competent to exercise full supervision and control.

"The grave abuses in individual cases of railroad management in the past represent wrongs not merely to the general public, but, above all, wrongs to fair-dealing and honest corporations and men of wealth, because they excite a popular anger and distrust which from the very nature of the case tends to include in the sweep of its resentment good and bad alike. From the standpoint of the public I can not too earnestly say that as soon as the natural and proper resentment aroused by these abuses becomes indiscriminate and unthinking, it also becomes not merely unwise and unfair, but calculated to defeat the very ends which those feeling it have in view. There has been plenty of dishonest work by corporations in the past. There will not be the slightest let-up in the effort to hunt down and punish every dishonest man. But the bulk of our business is honestly done. In the natural indignation the people feel over the dishonesty, it is all essential that they should not lose their heads and get drawn into an indiscriminate raid upon all corporations, all people of wealth, whether they do well or ill. Out of any such wild movement good will not come, can not come, and never has come. On the contrary, the surest way to invite reaction is to follow the lead of either demagogue or visionary in a sweeping assault upon property values and upon public confidence, which would work incalculable damage in the business world and would produce such distrust of the agitators that in the revulsion the distrust would extend to honest men who, in sincere and sane fashion, are trying to remedy the evils."

The antitrust law should not be repealed; but it should be made both more efficient and more in harmony with actual conditions. It should be so amended as to forbid only the kind of combination which does harm to the general public, such amendment to be accompanied by, or to be an incident of, a grant of supervisory power to the Government over these big concerns engaged in interstate business. This should be accompanied by provision for the compulsory publication of accounts and the subjection of books and papers to the inspection of the Government officials. A beginning has already been made for such supervision by the establishment of the Bureau of Corporations.

The antitrust law should not prohibit combinations that do no injustice to the public, still less those the existence of which is on the whole of benefit to the public. But even if this feature of the law were abolished, there would remain as an equally objectionable feature the difficulty and delay now incident to its enforcement. The Government must now submit to irksome and repeated delay before obtaining a final decision of the courts upon proceedings instituted, and even a favorable decree may mean an empty victory. Moreover, to attempt to control these corporations by lawsuits means to impose upon both the Department of Justice and the courts an impossible burden; it is not feasible to carry on more than a limited number of such suits. Such a law to be really effective must of course be administered by an executive body, and not merely by means of lawsuits. The design should be to prevent the abuses incident to the creation of unhealthy and improper combinations, instead of waiting until they are in existence and then attempting to destroy them by civil or criminal proceedings.

A combination should not be tolerated if it abuse the power acquired by combination to the public detriment. No corporation or association of any kind should be permitted to engage in foreign or interstate commerce that is formed for the purpose of, or whose operations create, a monopoly or general control of the production, sale, or distribution of any one or more of the prime necessities of life or articles of general use and necessity. Such combinations are against public policy; they violate the common law; the doors of the courts are closed to those who are parties to them, and I believe the Congress can close the channels of interstate commerce against them for its protection. The law should make its prohibitions and permissions as clear and definite as possible, leaving the least possible room for arbitrary action, or allegation of such action, on the part of the Executive, or of divergent interpretations by the courts. Among the points to be aimed at should be the prohibition of unhealthy competition, such as by rendering service at an actual loss for the purpose of crushing out competition, the prevention of inflation of capital, and the prohibition of a corporation's making exclusive trade with itself a condition of having any trade with itself. Reasonable agreements between, or combinations of, corporations should be permitted, provided they are first submitted to and approved by some appropriate Government body.

The Congress has the power to charter corporations to engage in interstate and foreign commerce, and a general law can be enacted under the provisions of which existing corporations could take out Federal charters and new Federal corporations could be created. An essential provision of such a law should be a method of predetermining by some Federal board or commission whether the applicant for a Federal charter was an association or combination within the restrictions of the Federal law. Provision should also be made for complete publicity in all matters affecting the public and complete protection to the investing public and the shareholders in the matter of issuing corporate securities. If an incorporation law is not deemed advisable, a license act for big interstate corporations might be enacted; or a combination of the two might be tried. The supervision established might be analogous to that now exercised over national banks. At least, the antitrust act should be supplemented by specific prohibitions of the methods which experience has shown have been of most service in enabling monopolistic combinations to crush out competition. The real owners of a corporation should be compelled to do business in their own name. The right to hold stock in other corporations should hereafter be denied to interstate corporations, unless on approval by the proper Government officials, and a prerequisite to such approval should be the listing with the Government of all owners and stockholders, both by the corporation owning such stock and by the corporation in which such stock is owned.

To confer upon the National Government, in connection with the amendment I advocate in the antitrust law, power of supervision over big business concerns engaged in interstate commerce, would benefit them as it has benefited the national banks. In the recent business crisis it is noteworthy that the institutions which failed were institutions which were not under the supervision and control of the National Government. Those which were under National control stood the test.

National control of the kind above advocated would be to the benefit of every well-managed railway. From the standpoint of the public there is need for additional tracks, additional terminals, and improvements in the actual handling of the railroads, and all this as rapidly as possible. Ample, safe, and speedy transportation facilities are even more necessary than cheap transportation. Therefore, there is need for the investment of money which will provide for all these things while at the same time securing as far as is possible better wages and shorter hours for their employees. Therefore, while there must be just and reasonable regulation of rates, we should be the first to protest against any arbitrary and unthinking movement to cut them down without the fullest and most careful consideration of all interests concerned and of the actual needs of the situation. Only a special body of men acting for the National Government under authority conferred upon it by the Congress is competent to pass judgment on such a matter.

Those who fear, from any reason, the extension of Federal activity will do well to study the history not only of the national banking act but of the pure-food law, and notably the meat inspection law recently enacted. The pure-food law was opposed so violently that its passage was delayed for a decade; yet it has worked unmixed and immediate good. The meat inspection law was even more violently assailed; and the same men who now denounce the attitude of the National Government in seeking to oversee and control the workings of interstate common carriers and business concerns, then asserted that we were "discrediting and ruining a great American industry." Two years have not elapsed, and already it has become evident that the great benefit the law confers upon the public is accompanied by an equal benefit to the reputable packing establishments. The latter are better off under the law than they were without it. The benefit to interstate common carriers and business concerns from the legislation I advocate would be equally marked.

PURE-FOOD LAW.

Incidentally, in the passage of the pure-food law the action of the various State food and dairy commissioners showed in striking fashion how much good for the whole people results from the hearty cooperation of the Federal and State officials in securing a given reform. It is primarily to the action of these State commissioners that we owe the enactment of this law; for they aroused the people, first to demand the enactment and enforcement of State laws on the subject, and then the enactment of the Federal law, without which the State laws were largely ineffective. There must be the closest cooperation between the National and State governments in administering these laws.

In my Message to the Congress a year ago I spoke as follows of the currency:

CURRENCY.

"I especially call your attention to the condition of our currency laws. The national-bank act has ably served a great purpose in aiding the enormous business development of the country, and within ten years there has been an increase in circulation per capita from $21.41 to $33.08. For several years evidence has been accumulating that additional legislation is needed. The recurrence of each crop season emphasizes the defects of the present laws. There must soon be a revision of them, because to leave them as they are means to incur liability of business disaster. Since your body adjourned there has been a fluctuation in the interest on call money from 2 per cent to 30 per cent, and the fluctuation was even greater during the preceding six months. The Secretary of the Treasury had to step in and by wise action put a stop to the most violent period of oscillation. Even worse than such fluctuation is the advance in commercial rates and the uncertainty felt in the sufficiency of credit even at high rates. All commercial interests suffer during each crop period. Excessive rates for call money in New York attract money from the interior banks into the speculative field. This depletes the fund that would otherwise be available for commercial uses, and commercial borrowers are forced to pay abnormal rates, so that each fall a tax, in the shape of increased interest charges, is placed on the whole commerce of the country.

"The mere statement of these facts shows that our present system is seriously defective. There is need of a change. Unfortunately, however, many of the proposed changes must be ruled from consideration because they are complicated, are not easy of comprehension, and tend to disturb existing rights and interests. We must also rule out any plan which would materially impair the value of the United States 2 per cent bonds now pledged to secure circulation, the issue of which was made under conditions peculiarly creditable to the Treasury. I do not press any especial plan. Various plans have recently been proposed by expert committees of bankers. Among the plans which are possibly feasible and which certainly should receive your consideration is that repeatedly brought to your attention by the present Secretary of the Treasury, the essential features of which have been approved by many prominent bankers and business men. According to this plan national banks should be permitted to issue a specified proportion of their capital in notes of a given kind, the issue to be taxed at so high a rate as to drive the notes back when not wanted in legitimate trade. This plan would not permit the issue of currency to give banks additional profits, but to meet the emergency presented by times of stringency.

"I do not say that this is the right system. I only advance it to emphasize my belief that there is need for the adoption of some system which shall be automatic and open to all sound banks, so as to avoid all possibility of discrimination and favoritism. Such a plan would tend to prevent the spasms of high money and speculation which now obtain in the New York market; for at present there is too much currency at certain seasons of the year, and its accumulation at New York tempts bankers to lend it at low rates for speculative purposes; whereas at other times when the crops are being moved there is urgent need for a large but temporary increase in the currency supply. It must never be forgotten that this question concerns business men generally quite as much as bankers; especially is this true of stockmen, farmers, and business men in the West; for at present at certain seasons of the year the difference in interest rates between the East and the West is from 6 to 10 per cent, whereas in Canada the corresponding difference is but 2 per cent. Any plan must, of course, guard the interests of western and southern bankers as carefully as it guards the interests of New York or Chicago bankers, and must be drawn from the standpoints of the farmer and the merchant no less than from the standpoints of the city banker and the country banker."

I again urge on the Congress the need of immediate attention to this matter. We need a greater elasticity in our currency; provided, of course, that we recognize the even greater need of a safe and secure currency. There must always be the most rigid examination by the National authorities. Provision should be made for an emergency currency. The emergency issue should, of course, be made with an effective guaranty, and upon conditions carefully prescribed by the Government. Such emergency issue must be based on adequate securities approved by the Government, and must be issued under a heavy tax. This would permit currency being issued when the demand for it was urgent, while securing its retirment as the demand fell off. It is worth investigating to determine whether officers and directors of national banks should ever be allowed to loan to themselves. Trust companies should be subject to the same supervision as banks; legislation to this effect should be enacted for the District of Columbia and the Territories.

Yet we must also remember that even the wisest legislation on the subject can only accomplish a certain amount. No legislation can by any possibility guarantee the business community against the results of speculative folly any more than it can guarantee an individual against the results of his extravagance. When an individual mortgages his house to buy an automobile he invites disaster; and when wealthy men, or men who pose as such, or are unscrupulously or foolishly eager to become such, indulge in reckless speculation—especially if it is accompanied by dishonesty—they jeopardize not only their own future but the future of all their innocent fellow-citizens, for they expose the whole business community to panic and distress.

REVENUE.

The income account of the Nation is in a most satisfactory condition. For the six fiscal years ending with the 1st of July last, the total expenditures and revenues of the National Government, exclusive of the postal revenues and expenditures, were, in round numbers, revenues, $3,465,000,000, and expenditures, $3,275,000,000. The net excess of income over expenditures, including in the latter the fifty millions expended for the Panama Canal, was one hundred and ninety million dollars for the six years, an average of about thirty-one millions a year. This represents an approximation between income and outgo which it would be hard to improve. The satisfactory working of the present tariff law has been chiefly responsible for this excellent showing. Nevertheless, there is an evident and constantly growing feeling among our people that the time is rapidly approaching when our system of revenue legislation must be revised.

THE TARIFF.

This country is definitely committed to the protective system and any effort to uproot it could not but cause widespread industrial disaster. In other words, the principle of the present tariff law could not with wisdom be changed. But in a country of such phenomenal growth as ours it is probably well that every dozen years or so the tariff laws should be carefully scrutinized so as to see that no excessive or improper benefits are conferred thereby, that proper revenue is provided, and that our foreign trade is encouraged. There must always be as a minimum a tariff which will not only allow for the collection of an ample revenue but which will at least make good the difference in the cost of production here and abroad; that is, the difference in the labor cost here and abroad, for the well-being of the wage-worker must ever be a cardinal point of American policy. The question should be approached purely from a business standpoint; both the time and the manner of the change being such as to arouse the minimum of agitation and disturbance in the business world, and to give the least play for selfish and factional motives. The sole consideration should be to see that the sum total of changes represents the public good. This means that the subject can not with wisdom be dealt with in the year preceding a Presidential election, because as a matter of fact experience has conclusively shown that at such a time it is impossible to get men to treat it from the standpoint of the public good. In my judgment the wise time to deal with the matter is immediately after such election.

INCOME TAX AND INHERITANCE TAX.

When our tax laws are revised the question of an income tax and an inheritance tax should receive the careful attention of our legislators. In my judgment both of these taxes should be part of our system of Federal taxation. I speak diffidently about the income tax because one scheme for an income tax was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court; while in addition it is a difficult tax to administer in its practical working, and great care would have to be exercised to see that it was not evaded by the very men whom it was most desirable to have taxed, for if so evaded it would, of course, be worse than no tax at all; as the least desirable of all taxes is the tax which bears heavily upon the honest as compared with the dishonest man. Nevertheless, a graduated income tax of the proper type would be a desirable feature of Federal taxation, and it is to be hoped that one may be devised which the Supreme Court will declare constitutional. The inheritance tax, however, is both a far better method of taxation, and far more important for the purpose of having the fortunes of the country bear in proportion to their increase in size a corresponding increase and burden of taxation. The Government has the absolute right to decide as to the terms upon which a man shall receive a bequest or devise from another, and this point in the devolution of property is especially appropriate for the imposition of a tax. Laws imposing such taxes have repeatedly been placed upon the National statute books and as repeatedly declared constitutional by the courts; and these laws contained the progressive principle, that is, after a certain amount is reached the bequest or gift, in life or death, is increasingly burdened and the rate of taxation is increased in proportion to the remoteness of blood of the man receiving the bequest. These principles are recognized already in the leading civilized nations of the world. In Great Britain all the estates worth $5,000 or less are practically exempt from death duties, while the increase is such that when an estate exceeds five millions of dollars in value and passes to a distant kinsman or stranger in blood the Government receives all told an amount equivalent to nearly a fifth of the whole estate. In France so much of an inheritance as exceeds $10,000,000 pays over a fifth to the State if it passes to a distant relative. The German law is especially interesting to us because it makes the inheritance tax an imperial measure while allotting to the individual States of the Empire a portion of the proceeds and permitting them to impose taxes in addition to those imposed by the Imperial Government. Small inheritances are exempt, but the tax is so sharply progressive that when the inheritance is still not very large, provided it is not an agricultural or a forest land, it is taxed at the rate of 25 per cent if it goes to distant relatives. There is no reason why in the United States the National Government should not impose inheritance taxes in addition to those imposed by the States, and when we last had an inheritance tax about one-half of the States levied such taxes concurrently with the National Government, making a combined maximum rate, in some cases as high as 25 per cent. The French law has one feature which is to be heartily commended. The progressive principle is so applied that each higher rate is imposed only on the excess above the amount subject to the next lower rate; so that each increase of rate will apply only to a certain amount above a certain maximum. The tax should if possible be made to bear more heavily upon those residing without the country than within it. A heavy progressive tax upon a very large fortune is in no way such a tax upon thrift or industry as a like tax would be on a small fortune. No advantage comes either to the country as a whole or to the individuals inheriting the money by permitting the transmission in their entirety of the enormous fortunes which would be affected by such a tax; and as an incident to its function of revenue raising, such a tax would help to preserve a measurable equality of opportunity for the people of the generations growing to manhood. We have not the slightest sympathy with that socialistic idea which would try to put laziness, thriftlessness and inefficiency on a par with industry, thrift and efficiency; which would strive to break up not merely private property, but what is far more important, the home, the chief prop upon which our whole civilization stands. Such a theory, if ever adopted, would mean the ruin of the entire country—a ruin which would bear heaviest upon the weakest, upon those least able to shift for themselves. But proposals for legislation such as this herein advocated are directly opposed to this class of socialistic theories. Our aim is to recognize what Lincoln pointed out: The fact that there are some respects in which men are obviously not equal; but also to insist that there should be an equality of self-respect and of mutual respect, an equality of rights before the law, and at least an approximate equality in the conditions under which each man obtains the chance to show the stuff that is in him when compared to his fellows.

ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW.

A few years ago there was loud complaint that the law could not be invoked against wealthy offenders. There is no such complaint now. The course of the Department of Justice during the last few years has been such as to make it evident that no man stands above the law, that no corporation is so wealthy that it can not be held to account. The Department of Justice has been as prompt to proceed against the wealthiest malefactor whose crime was one of greed and cunning as to proceed against the agitator who incites to brutal violence. Everything that can be done under the existing law, and with the existing state of public opinion, which so profoundly influences both the courts and juries, has been done. But the laws themselves need strengthening in more than one important point; they should be made more definite, so that no honest man can be led unwittingly to break them, and so that the real wrongdoer can be readily punished.

Moreover, there must be the public opinion back of the laws or the laws themselves will be of no avail. At present, while the average juryman undoubtedly wishes to see trusts broken up, and is quite ready to fine the corporation itself, he is very reluctant to find the facts proven beyond a reasonable doubt when it comes to sending to jail a member of the business community for indulging in practices which are profoundly unhealthy, but which, unfortunately, the business community has grown to recognize as well-nigh normal. Both the present condition of the law and the present temper of juries render it a task of extreme difficulty to get at the real wrongdoer in any such case, especially by imprisonment. Yet it is from every standpoint far preferable to punish the prime offender by imprisonment rather than to fine the corporation, with the attendant damage to stockholders.

The two great evils in the execution of our criminal laws to-day are sentimentality and technicality. For the latter the remedy must come from the hands of the legislatures, the courts, and the lawyers. The other must depend for its cure upon the gradual growth of a sound public opinion which shall insist that regard for the law and the demands of reason shall control all other influences and emotions in the jury box. Both of these evils must be removed or public discontent with the criminal law will continue.

INJUNCTIONS.

Instances of abuse in the granting of injunctions in labor disputes continue to occur, and the resentment in the minds of those who feel that their rights are being invaded and their liberty of action and of speech unwarrantably restrained continues likewise to grow. Much of the attack on the use of the process of injunction is wholly without warrant; but I am constrained to express the belief that for some of it there is warrant. This question is becoming more and more one of prime importance, and unless the courts will themselves deal with it in effective manner, it is certain ultimately to demand some form of legislative action. It would be most unfortunate for our social welfare if we should permit many honest and law-abiding citizens to feel that they had just cause for regarding our courts with hostility. I earnestly commend to the attention of the Congress this matter, so that some way may be devised which will limit the abuse of injunctions and protect those rights which from time to time it unwarrantably invades. Moreover, discontent is often expressed with the use of the process of injunction by the courts, not only in labor disputes, but where State laws are concerned. I refrain from discussion of this question as I am informed that it will soon receive the consideration of the Supreme Court.

The Federal courts must of course decide ultimately what are the respective spheres of State and Nation in connection with any law, State or National, and they must decide definitely and finally in matters affecting individual citizens, not only as to the rights and wrongs of labor but as to the rights and wrongs of capital; and the National Government must always see that the decision of the court is put into effect The process of injunction is an essential adjunct of the court's doing its work well; and as preventive measures are always better than remedial, the wise use of this process is from every standpoint commendable. But where it is recklessly or unnecessarily used, the abuse should be censured, above all by the very men who are properly anxious to prevent any effort to shear the courts of this necessary power. The court's decision must be final; the protest is only against the conduct of individual judges in needlessly anticipating such final decision, or in the tyrannical use of what is nominally a temporary injunction to accomplish what is in fact a permanent decision.

ACCIDENTS.

The loss of life and limb from railroad accidents in this country has become appalling. It is a subject of which the National Government should take supervision. It might be well to begin by providing for a Federal inspection of interstate railroads somewhat along the lines of Federal inspection of steamboats, although not going so far; perhaps at first all that it would be necessary to have would be some officer whose duty would be to investigate all accidents on interstate railroads and report in detail the causes thereof. Such an officer should make it his business to get into close touch with railroad operating men so as to become thoroughly familiar with every side of the question, the idea being to work along the lines of the present steamboat inspection law.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.

The National Government should be a model employer. It should demand the highest quality of service from each of its employees and it should care for all of them properly in return. Congress should adopt legislation providing limited but definite compensation for accidents to all workmen within the scope of the Federal power, including employees of navy yards and arsenals. In other words, a model employers' liability act, far-reaching and thoroughgoing, should be enacted which should apply to all positions, public and private, over which the National Government has jurisdiction. The number of accidents to wage-workers, including those that are preventable and those that are not, has become appalling in the mechanical, manufacturing, and transportation operations of the day. It works grim hardship to the ordinary wage-worker and his family to have the effect of such an accident fall solely upon him; and, on the other hand, there are whole classes of attorneys who exist only by inciting men who may or may not have been wronged to undertake suits for negligence. As a matter of fact, a suit for negligence is generally an inadequate remedy for the person injured, while it often causes altogether disproportionate annoyance to the employer. The law should be made such that the payment for accidents by the employer would be automatic instead of being a matter for lawsuits. Workmen should receive certain and definite compensation for all accidents in industry irrespective of negligence. The employer is the agent of the public and on his own responsibility and for his own profit he serves the public. When he starts in motion agencies which create risks for others, he should take all the ordinary and extraordinary risks involved; and the risk he thus at the moment assumes will ultimately be assumed, as it ought to be, by the general public. Only in this way can the shock of the accident be diffused, instead of falling upon the man or woman least able to bear it, as is now the case. The community at large should share the burdens as well as the benefits of industry. By the proposed law, employers would gain a desirable certainty of obligation and get rid of litigation to determine it, while the workman and his family would be relieved from a crushing load. With such a policy would come increased care, and accidents would be reduced in number. The National laws providing for employers' liability on railroads engaged in interstate commerce and for safety appliances, as well as for diminishing the hours any employee of a railroad should be permitted to work, should all be strengthened wherever in actual practice they have shown weakness; they should be kept on the statute books in thoroughgoing form.

The constitutionality of the employers' liability act passed by the preceding Congress has been carried before the courts. In two jurisdictions the law has been declared unconstitutional, and in three jurisdictions its constitutionality has been affirmed. The question has been carried to the Supreme Court, the case has been heard by that tribunal, and a decision is expected at an early date. In the event that the court should affirm the constitutionality of the act, I urge further legislation along the lines advocated in my Message to the preceding Congress. The practice of putting the entire burden of loss to life or limb upon the victim or the victim's family is a form of social injustice in which the United States stands in unenviable prominence. In both our Federal and our State legislation we have, with few exceptions, scarcely gone farther than the repeal of the fellow-servant principle of the old law of liability, and in some of our States even this slight modification of a completely outgrown principle has not yet been secured. The legislation of the rest of the industrial world stands out in striking contrast to our backwardness in this respect. Since 1895 practically every country of Europe, together with Great Britain, New Zealand, Australia, British Columbia, and the Cape of Good Hope has enacted legislation embodying in one form or another the complete recognition of the principle which places upon the employer the entire trade risk in the various lines of industry. I urge upon the Congress the enactment of a law which will at the same time bring Federal legislation up to the standard already established by all the European countries, and which will serve as a stimulus to the various States to perfect their legislation in this regard.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

The Congress should consider the extension of the eight-hour law. The constitutionality of the present law has recently been called into question, and the Supreme Court has decided that the existing legislation is unquestionably within the powers of the Congress. The principle of the eight-hour day should as rapidly and as far as practicable be extended to the entire work carried on by the Government; and the present law should be amended to embrace contracts on those public works which the present wording of the act has been construed to exclude. The general introduction of the eight-hour day should be the goal toward which we should steadily tend, and the Government should set the example in this respect.

COMPULSORY INVESTIGATION OF INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES.

Strikes and lockouts, with their attendant loss and suffering, continue to increase. For the five years ending December 31, 1905, the number of strikes was greater than those in any previous ten years and was double the number in the preceding five years. These figures indicate the increasing need of providing some machinery to deal with this class of disturbances in the interest alike of the employer, the employee, and the general public. I renew my previous recommendation that the Congress favorably consider the matter of creating the machinery for compulsory investigation of such industrial controversies as are of sufficient magnitude and of sufficient concern to the people of the country as a whole to warrant the Federal Government in taking action.

The need for some provision for such investigation was forcibly illustrated during the past summer. A strike of telegraph operators seriously interfered with telegraphic communication, causing great damage to business interests and serious inconvenience to the general public. Appeals were made to me from many parts of the country, from city councils, from boards of trade, from chambers of commerce, and from labor organizations, urging that steps be taken to terminate the strike. Everything that could with any propriety be done by a representative of the Government was done, without avail, and for weeks the public stood by and suffered without recourse of any kind. Had the machinery existed and had there been authority for compulsory investigation of the dispute, the public would have been placed in possession of the merits of the controversy, and public opinion would probably have brought about a prompt adjustment.

Each successive step creating machinery for the adjustment of labor difficulties must be taken with caution, but we should endeavor to make progress in this direction.

The provisions of the act of 1898 creating the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Commissioner of Labor a board of mediation in controversies between interstate railroads and their employees, has, for the first time, been subjected to serious tests within the past year, and the wisdom of the experiment has been fully demonstrated. The creation of a board for compulsory investigation in cases where mediation fails and arbitration is rejected is the next logical step in a progressive program.

CAPITAL AND LABOR.

It is certain that for some time to come there will be a constant increase absolutely, and perhaps relatively, of those among our citizens who dwell in cities or towns of some size and who work for wages. This means that there will be an ever-increasing need to consider the problems inseparable from a great industrial civilization. Where an immense and complex business, especially in those branches relating to manufacture and transportation, is transacted by a large number of capitalists who employ a very much larger number of wage-earners, the former tend more and more to combine into corporations and the latter into unions. The relations of the capitalist and wage-worker to one another, and of each to the general public, are not always easy to adjust; and to put them and keep them on a satisfactory basis is one of the most important and one of the most delicate tasks before our whole civilization. Much of the work for the accomplishment of this end must be done by the individuals concerned themselves, whether singly or in combination; and the one fundamental fact that must never be lost track of is that the character of the average man, whether he be a man of means or a man who works with his hands, is the most important factor in solving the problem aright. But it is almost equally important to remember that without good laws it is also impossible to reach the proper solution. It is idle to hold that without good laws evils such as child labor, as the overworking of women, as the failure to protect employees from loss of life or limb, can be effectively reached, any more than the evils of rebates and stock-watering can be reached without good laws. To fail to stop these practices by legislation means to force honest men into them, because otherwise the dishonest who surely will take advantage of them will have everything their own way. If the States will correct these evils, well and good; but the Nation must stand ready to aid them.

No question growing out of our rapid and complex industrial development is more important than that of the employment of women and children. The presence of women in industry reacts with extreme directness upon the character of the home and upon family life, and the conditions surrounding the employment of children bear a vital relation to our future citizenship. Our legislation in those areas under the control of the Congress is very much behind the legislation of our more progressive States. A thorough and comprehensive measure should be adopted at this session of the Congress relating to the employment of women and children in the District of Columbia and the Territories. The investigation into the condition of women and children wage-earners recently authorized and directed by the Congress is now being carried on in the various States, and I recommend that the appropriation made last year for beginning this work be renewed, in order that we may have the thorough and comprehensive investigation which the subject demands. The National Government has as an ultimate resort for control of child labor the use of the interstate commerce clause to prevent the products of child labor from entering into interstate commerce. But before using this it ought certainly to enact model laws on the subject for the Territories under its own immediate control.

There is one fundamental proposition which can be laid down as regards all these matters, namely: While honesty by itself will not solve the problem, yet the insistence upon honesty—not merely technical honesty, but honesty in purpose and spirit—is an essential element in arriving at a right conclusion. Vice in its cruder and more archaic forms shocks everybody; but there is very urgent need that public opinion should be just as severe in condemnation of the vice which hides itself behind class or professional loyalty, or which denies that it is vice if it can escape conviction in the courts. The public and the representatives of the public, the high officials, whether on the bench or in executive or legislative positions, need to remember that often the most dangerous criminals, so far as the life of the Nation is concerned, are not those who commit the crimes known to and condemned by the popular conscience for centuries, but those who commit crimes only rendered possible by the complex conditions of our modern industrial life. It makes not a particle of difference whether these crimes are committed by a capitalist or by a laborer, by a leading banker or manufacturer or railroad man, or by a leading representative of a labor union. Swindling in stocks, corrupting legislatures, making fortunes by the inflation of securities, by wrecking railroads, by destroying competitors through rebates—these forms of wrongdoing in the capitalist, are far more infamous than any ordinary form of embezzlement or forgery; yet it is a matter of extreme difficulty to secure the punishment of the man most guilty of them, most responsible for them. The business man who condones such conduct stands on a level with the labor man who deliberately supports a corrupt demagogue and agitator, whether head of a union or head of some municipality, because he is said to have "stood by the union." The members of the business community, the educators, or clergymen, who condone and encourage the first kind of wrongdoing, are no more dangerous to the community, but are morally even worse, than the labor men who are guilty of the second type of wrongdoing, because less is to be pardoned those who have no such excuse as is furnished either by ignorance or by dire need.

FARMERS AND WAGE-WORKERS.

When the Department of Agriculture was founded there was much sneering as to its usefulness. No Department of the Government, however, has more emphatically vindicated its usefulness, and none save the Post-Office Department comes so continually and intimately into touch with the people. The two citizens whose welfare is in the aggregate most vital to the welfare of the Nation, and therefore to the welfare of all other citizens, are the wage-worker who does manual labor and the tiller of the soil, the farmer. There are, of course, kinds of labor where the work must be purely mental, and there are other kinds of labor where, under existing conditions, very little demand indeed is made upon the mind, though I am glad to say that the proportion of men engaged in this kind of work is diminishing. But in any community with the solid, healthy qualities which make up a really great nation the bulk of the people should do work which calls for the exercise of both body and mind. Progress can not permanently exist in the abandonment of physical labor, but in the development of physical labor, so that it shall represent more and more the work of the trained mind in the trained body. Our school system is gravely defective in so far as it puts a premium upon mere literary training and tends therefore to train the boy away from the farm and the workshop. Nothing is more needed than the best type of industrial school, the school for mechanical industries in the city, the school for practically teaching agriculture in the country. The calling of the skilled tiller of the soil, the calling of the skilled mechanic, should alike be recognized as professions, just as emphatically as the callings of lawyer, doctor, merchant, or clerk. The schools should recognize this fact and it should equally be recognized in popular opinion. The young man who has the farsightedness and courage to recognize it and to get over the idea that it makes a difference whether what he earns is called salary or wages, and who refuses to enter the crowded field of the so-called professions, and takes to constructive industry instead, is reasonably sure of an ample reward in earnings, in health, in opportunity to marry early, and to establish a home with a fair amount of freedom from worry. It should be one of our prime objects to put both the farmer and the mechanic on a higher plane of efficiency and reward, so as to increase their effectiveness in the economic world, and therefore the dignity, the remuneration, and the power of their positions in the social world.

No growth of cities, no growth of wealth, can make up for any loss in either the number or the character of the farming population. We of the United States should realize this above almost all other peoples. We began our existence as a nation of farmers, and in every great crisis of the past a peculiar dependence has had to be placed upon the farming population; and this dependence has hitherto been justified. But it can not be justified in the future if agriculture is permitted to sink in the scale as compared with other employments. We can not afford to lose that preeminently typical American, the farmer who owns his own medium-sized farm. To have his place taken by either a class of small peasant proprietors, or by a class of great landlords with tenant-farmed estates would be a veritable calamity. The growth of our cities is a good thing but only in so far as it does not mean a growth at the expense of the country farmer. We must welcome the rise of physical sciences in their application to agricultural practices, and we must do all we can to render country conditions more easy and pleasant. There are forces which now tend to bring about both these results, but they are, as yet, in their infancy. The National Government through the Department of Agriculture should do all it can by joining with the State governments and with independent associations of farmers to encourage the growth in the open farming country of such institutional and social movements as will meet the demand of the best type of farmers, both for the improvement of their farms and for the betterment of the life itself. The Department of Agriculture has in many places, perhaps especially in certain districts of the South, accomplished an extraordinary amount by cooperating with and teaching the farmers through their associations, on their own soil, how to increase their income by managing their farms better than they were hitherto managed. The farmer must not lose his independence, his initiative, his rugged self-reliance, yet he must learn to work in the heartiest cooperation with his fellows, exactly as the business man has learned to work; and he must prepare to use to constantly better advantage the knowledge that can be obtained from agricultural colleges, while he must insist upon a practical curriculum in the schools in which his children are taught. The Department of Agriculture and the Department of Commerce and Labor both deal with the fundamental needs of our people in the production of raw material and its manufacture and distribution, and therefore, with the welfare of those who produce it in the raw state, and of those who manufacture and distribute it. The Department of Commerce and Labor has but recently been founded but has already justified its existence; while the Department of Agriculture yields to no other in the Government in the practical benefits which it produces in proportion to the public money expended. It must continue in the future to deal with growing crops as it has dealt in the past, but it must still further extend its field of usefulness hereafter by dealing with live men, through a far-reaching study and treatment of the problems of farm life alike from the industrial and economic and social standpoint. Farmers must cooperate with one another and with the Government, and the Government can best give its aid through associations of farmers, so as to deliver to the farmer the large body of agricultural knowledge which has been accumulated by the National and State governments and by the agricultural colleges and schools.

The grain producing industry of the country, one of the most important in the United States, deserves special consideration at the hands of the Congress. Our grain is sold almost exclusively by grades. To secure satisfactory results in our home markets and to facilitate our trade abroad, these grades should approximate the highest degree of uniformity and certainty. The present diverse methods of inspection and grading throughout the country under different laws and boards, result in confusion and lack of uniformity, destroying that confidence which is necessary for healthful trade. Complaints against the present methods have continued for years and they are growing in volume and intensity, not only in this country but abroad. I therefore suggest to the Congress the advisability of a National system of inspection and grading of grain entering into interstate and foreign commerce as a remedy for the present evils.

INLAND WATERWAYS.

The conservation of our natural resources and their proper use constitute the fundamental problem which underlies almost every other problem of our National life. We must maintain for our civilization the adequate material basis without which that civilization can not exist. We must show foresight, we must look ahead. As a nation we not only enjoy a wonderful measure of present prosperity but if this prosperity is used aright it is an earnest of future success such as no other nation will have. The reward of foresight for this Nation is great and easily foretold. But there must be the look ahead, there must be a realization of the fact that to waste, to destroy, our natural resources, to skin and exhaust land instead of using it so as to increase its usefulness, will result in undermining in the days of our children the very prosperity which we ought by right to hand down to them amplified and developed. For the last few years, through several agencies, the Government has been endeavoring to get our people to look ahead and to substitute a planned and orderly development of our resources in place of a haphazard striving for immediate profit. Our great river systems should be developed as National water highways; the Mississippi, with its tributaries, standing first in importance, and the Columbia second, although there are many others of importance on the Pacific, the Atlantic and the Gulf slopes. The National Government should undertake this work, and I hope a beginning will be made in the present Congress; and the greatest of all our rivers, the Mississippi, should receive especial attention. From the Great Lakes to the mouth of the Mississippi there should be a deep waterway, with deep waterways leading from it to the East and the West. Such a waterway would practically mean the extension of our coast line into the very heart of the country. It would be of incalculable benefit to our people. If begun at once it can be carried through in time appreciably to relieve the congestion of our great freight-carrying lines of railroads. The work should be systematically and continuously carried forward in accordance with some well-conceived plan. The main streams should be improved to the highest point of efficiency before the improvement of the branches is attempted; and the work should be kept free from every taint of recklessness or jobbery. The inland waterways which lie just back of the whole eastern and southern coasts should likewise be developed. Moreover, the development of our waterways involves many other important water problems, all of which should be considered as part of the same general scheme. The Government dams should be used to produce hundreds of thousands of horsepower as an incident to improve navigation; for the annual value of the unused water-power of the United States perhaps exceeds the annual value of the products of all our mines. As an incident to creating the deep waterway down the Mississippi the Government should build along its whole lower length levees which taken together with the control of the headwaters, will at once and forever put a complete stop to all threat of floods in the immensely fertile Delta region. The territory lying adjacent to the Mississippi along its lower course will thereby become one of the most prosperous and populous, as it is already one of the most fertile, farming regions in all the world. I have appointed an Inland Waterways Commission to study and outline a comprehensive scheme of development along all the lines indicated. Later I shall lay its report before the Congress.

RECLAMATION WORK.

Irrigation should be far more extensively developed than at present, not only in the States of the Great Plains and the Rocky Mountains, but in many others, as, for instance, in large portions of the South Atlantic and Gulf States, where it should go hand in hand with the reclamation of swamp land. The Federal Government should seriously devote itself to this task, realizing that utilization of waterways and water-power, forestry, irrigation, and the reclamation of lands threatened with overflow, are all interdependent parts of the same problem. The work of the Reclamation Service in developing the larger opportunities of the western half of our country for irrigation is more important than almost any other movement. The constant purpose of the Government in connection with the Reclamation Service has been to use the water resources of the public lands for the ultimate greatest good of the greatest number; in other words, to put upon the land permanent homemakers, to use and develop it for themselves and for their children and children's children. There has been, of course, opposition to this work; opposition from some interested men who desire to exhaust the land for their own immediate profit without regard to the welfare of the next generation, and opposition from honest and well-meaning men who did not fully understand the subject or who did not look far enough ahead. This opposition is, I think, dying away, and our people are understanding that it would be utterly wrong to allow a few individuals to exhaust for their own temporary personal profit the resources which ought to be developed through use so as to be conserved for the permanent common advantage of the people as a whole.

PUBLIC LANDS.

The effort of the Government to deal with the public land has been based upon the same principle as that of the Reclamation Service. The land law system which was designed to meet the needs of the fertile and well-watered regions of the Middle West has largely broken down when applied to the dryer regions of the Great Plains, the mountains, and much of the Pacific slope, where a farm of 160 acres is inadequate for self-support. In these regions the system lent itself to fraud, and much land passed out of the hands of the Government without passing into the hands of the home-maker. The Department of the Interior and the Department of Justice joined in prosecuting the offenders against the law; and they have accomplished much, while where the administration of the law has been defective it has been changed. But the laws themselves are defective. Three years ago a public lands commission was appointed to scrutinize the law, and defects, and recommend a remedy. Their examination specifically showed the existence of great fraud upon the public domain, and their recommendations for changes in the law were made with the design of conserving the natural resources of every part of the public lands by putting it to its best use. Especial attention was called to the prevention of settlement by the passage of great areas of public land into the hands of a few men, and to the enormous waste caused by unrestricted grazing upon the open range. The recommendations of the Public Lands Commission are sound, for they are especially in the interest of the actual home-maker; and where the small home-maker can not at present utilize the land they provide that the Government shall keep control of it so that it may not be monopolized by a few men. The Congress has not yet acted upon these recommendations; but they are so just and proper, so essential to our National welfare, that I feel confident, if the Congress will take time to consider them, that they will ultimately be adopted.

Some such legislation as that proposed is essential in order to preserve the great stretches of public grazing land which are unfit for cultivation under present methods and are valuable only for the forage which they supply. These stretches amount in all to some 300,000,000 acres, and are open to the free grazing of cattle, sheep, horses and goats, without restriction. Such a system, or rather such lack of system, means that the range is not so much used as wasted by abuse. As the West settles the range becomes more and more over-grazed. Much of it can not be used to advantage unless it is fenced, for fencing is the only way by which to keep in check the owners of nomad flocks which roam hither and thither, utterly destroying the pastures and leaving a waste behind so that their presence is incompatible with the presence of home-makers. The existing fences are all illegal. Some of them represent the improper exclusion of actual settlers, actual home-makers, from territory which is usurped by great cattle companies. Some of them represent what is in itself a proper effort to use the range for those upon the land, and to prevent its use by nomadic outsiders. All these fences, those that are hurtful and those that are beneficial, are alike illegal and must come down. But it is an outrage that the law should necessitate such action on the part of the Administration. The unlawful fencing of public lands for private grazing must be stopped, but the necessity which occasioned it must be provided for. The Federal Government should have control of the range, whether by permit or lease, as local necessities may determine. Such control could secure the great benefit of legitimate fencing, while at the same time securing and promoting the settlement of the country. In some places it may be that the tracts of range adjacent to the homesteads of actual settlers should be allotted to them severally or in common for the summer grazing of their stock. Elsewhere it may be that a lease system would serve the purpose; the leases to be temporary and subject to the rights of settlement, and the amount charged being large enough merely to permit of the efficient and beneficial control of the range by the Government, and of the payment to the county of the equivalent of what it would otherwise receive in taxes. The destruction of the public range will continue until some such laws as these are enacted. Fully to prevent the fraud in the public lands which, through the joint action of the Interior Department and the Department of Justice, we have been endeavoring to prevent, there must be further legislation, and especially a sufficient appropriation to permit the Department of the Interior to examine certain classes of entries on the ground before they pass into private ownership. The Government should part with its title only to the actual home-maker, not to the profit-maker who does not care to make a home. Our prime object is to secure the rights and guard the interests of the small ranchman, the man who plows and pitches hay for himself. It is this small ranchman, this actual settler and home-maker, who in the long run is most hurt by permitting thefts of the public land in whatever form.

FORESTS.

Optimism is a good characteristic, but if carried to an excess it becomes foolishness. We are prone to speak of the resources of this country as inexhaustible; this is not so. The mineral wealth of the country, the coal, iron, oil, gas, and the like, does not reproduce itself, and therefore is certain to be exhausted ultimately; and wastefulness in dealing with it to-day means that our descendants will feel the exhaustion a generation or two before they otherwise would. But there are certain other forms of waste which could be entirely stopped. The waste of soil by washing, for instance, which is among the most dangerous of all wastes now in progress in the United States, is easily preventable, so that this present enormous loss of fertility is entirely unnecessary. The preservation or replacement of the forests is one of the most important means of preventing this loss. We have made a beginning in forest preservation, but it is only a beginning. At present lumbering is the fourth greatest industry in the United States; and yet, so rapid has been the rate of exhaustion of timber in the United States in the past, and so rapidly is the remainder being exhausted, that the country is unquestionably on the verge of a timber famine which will be felt in every household in the land. There has already been a rise in the price of lumber, but there is certain to be a more rapid and heavier rise in the future. The present annual consumption of lumber is certainly three times as great as the annual growth; and if the consumption and growth continue unchanged, practically all our lumber will be exhausted in another generation, while long before the limit to complete exhaustion is reached the growing scarcity will make itself felt in many blighting ways upon our National welfare. About 20 per cent of our forested territory is now reserved in National forests; but these do not include the most valuable timber lands, and in any event the proportion is too small to expect that the reserves can accomplish more than a mitigation of the trouble which is ahead of the nation. Far more drastic action is needed. Forests can be lumbered so as to give to the public the full use of their mercantile timber without the slightest detriment to the forest, any more than it is a detriment to a farm to furnish a harvest; so there is no parallel between forests and mines, which can only be completely used by exhaustion. But forests, if used as all our forests have been used in the past and as most of them are still used, will be either wholly destroyed, or so damaged that many decades have to pass before effective use can be made of them again. All these facts are so obvious that it is extraordinary that it should be necessary to repeat them. Every business man in the land, every writer in the newspapers, every man or woman of an ordinary school education, ought to be able to see that immense quantities of timber are used in the country, that the forests which supply this timber are rapidly being exhausted, and that, if no change takes place, exhaustion will come comparatively soon, and that the effects of it will be felt severely in the every-day life of our people. Surely, when these facts are so obvious, there should be no delay in taking preventive measures. Yet we seem as a nation to be willing to proceed in this matter with happy-go-lucky indifference even to the immediate future. It is this attitude which permits the self-interest of a very few persons to weigh for more than the ultimate interest of all our people. There are persons who find it to their immense pecuniary benefit to destroy the forests by lumbering. They are to be blamed for thus sacrificing the future of the Nation as a whole to their own self-interest of the moment; but heavier blame attaches to the people at large for permitting such action, whether in the White Mountains, in the southern Alleghenies, or in the Rockies and Sierras. A big lumbering company, impatient for immediate returns and not caring to look far enough ahead, will often deliberately destroy all the good timber in a region, hoping afterwards to move on to some new country. The shiftless man of small means, who does not care to become an actual home-maker but would like immediate profit, will find it to his advantage to take up timber land simply to turn it over to such a big company, and leave it valueless for future settlers. A big mine owner, anxious only to develop his mine at the moment, will care only to cut all the timber that he wishes without regard to the future—probably not looking ahead to the condition of the country when the forests are exhausted, any more than he does to the condition when the mine is worked out. I do not blame these men nearly as much as I blame the supine public opinion, the indifferent public opinion, which permits their action to go unchecked. Of course to check the waste of timber means that there must be on the part of the public the acceptance of a temporary restriction in the lavish use of the timber, in order to prevent the total loss of this use in the future. There are plenty of men in public and private life who actually advocate the continuance of the present system of unchecked and wasteful extravagance, using as an argument the fact that to check it will of course mean interference with the ease and comfort of certain people who now get lumber at less cost than they ought to pay, at the expense of the future generations. Some of these persons actually demand that the present forest reserves be thrown open to destruction, because, forsooth, they think that thereby the price of lumber could be put down again for two or three or more years. Their attitude is precisely like that of an agitator protesting against the outlay of money by farmers on manure and in taking care of their farms generally. Undoubtedly, if the average farmer were content absolutely to ruin his farm, he could for two or three years avoid spending any money on it, and yet make a good deal of money out of it. But only a savage would, in his private affairs, show such reckless disregard of the future; yet it is precisely this reckless disregard of the future which the opponents of the forestry system are now endeavoring to get the people of the United States to show. The only trouble with the movement for the preservation of our forests is that it has not gone nearly far enough, and was not begun soon enough. It is a most fortunate thing, however, that we began it when we did. We should acquire in the Appalachian and White Mountain regions all the forest lands that it is possible to acquire for the use of the Nation. These lands, because they form a National asset, are as emphatically national as the rivers which they feed, and which flow through so many States before they reach the ocean.

TARIFF ON WOOD PULP.

There should be no tariff on any forest product grown in this country; and, in especial, there should be no tariff on wood pulp; due notice of the change being of course given to those engaged in the business so as to enable them to adjust themselves to the new conditions. The repeal of the duty on wood pulp should if possible be accompanied by an agreement with Canada that there shall be no export duty on Canadian pulp wood.

MINERAL LANDS.

In the eastern United States the mineral fuels have already passed into the hands of large private owners, and those of the West are rapidly following. It is obvious that these fuels should be conserved and not wasted, and it would be well to protect the people against unjust and extortionate prices, so far as that can still be done. What has been accomplished in the great oil fields of the Indian Territory by the action of the Administration, offers a striking example of the good results of such a policy. In my judgment the Government should have the right to keep the fee of the coal, oil, and gas fields in its own possession and to lease the rights to develop them under proper regulations; or else, if the Congress will not adopt this method, the coal deposits should be sold under limitations, to conserve them as public utilities, the right to mine coal being separated from the title to the soil. The regulations should permit coal lands to be worked in sufficient quantity by the several corporations. The present limitations have been absurd, excessive, and serve no useful purpose, and often render it necessary that there should be either fraud or else abandonment of the work of getting out the coal.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

Work on the Panama Canal is proceeding in a highly satisfactory manner. In March last, John F. Stevens, chairman of the Commission and chief engineer, resigned, and the Commission was reorganized and constituted as follows: Lieut. Col. George W. Goethals, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, chairman and chief engineer; Maj. D. D. Gaillard, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army; Maj. William L. Sibert, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army; Civil Engineer H. H. Rousseau, U. S. Navy; Mr. J. C. S. Blackburn; Col. W. C. Gorgas, U. S. Army, and Mr. Jackson Smith, Commissioners. This change of authority and direction went into effect on April 1, without causing a perceptible check to the progress of the work. In March the total excavation in the Culebra Cut, where effort was chiefly concentrated, was 815,270 cubic yards. In April this was increased to 879,527 cubic yards. There was a considerable decrease in the output for May and June owing partly to the advent of the rainy season and partly to temporary trouble with the steam shovelmen over the question of wages. This trouble was settled satisfactorily to all parties and in July the total excavation advanced materially and in August the grand total from all points in the canal prism by steam shovels and dredges exceeded all previous United States records, reaching 1,274,404 cubic yards. In September this record was eclipsed and a total of 1,517,412 cubic yards was removed. Of this amount 1,481,307 cubic yards were from the canal prism and 36,105 cubic yards were from accessory works. These results were achieved in the rainy season with a rainfall in August of 11.89 inches and in September of 11.65 inches. Finally, in October, the record was again eclipsed, the total excavation being 1,868,729 cubic yards; a truly extraordinary record, especially in view of the heavy rainfall, which was 17.1 inches. In fact, experience during the last two rainy seasons demonstrates that the rains are a less serious obstacle to progress than has hitherto been supposed.

Work on the lock and dams at Gatun, which began actively in March last, has advanced so far that it is thought that masonry work on the locks can be begun within fifteen months. In order to remove all doubt as to the satisfactory character of the foundations for the locks of the Canal, the Secretary of War requested three eminent civil engineers, of special experience in such construction, Alfred Noble, Frederic P. Stearns and John R. Freeman, to visit the Isthmus and make thorough personal investigations of the sites. These gentlemen went to the Isthmus in April and by means of test pits which had been dug for the purpose, they inspected the proposed foundations, and also examined the borings that had been made. In their report to the Secretary of War, under date of May 2, 1907, they said: "We found that all of the locks, of the dimensions now proposed, will rest upon rock of such character that it will furnish a safe and stable foundation." Subsequent new borings, conducted by the present Commission, have fully confirmed this verdict. They show that the locks will rest on rock for their entire length. The cross section of the dam and method of construction will be such as to insure against any slip or sloughing off. Similar examination of the foundations of the locks and dams on the Pacific side are in progress. I believe that the locks should be made of a width of 120 feet.

Last winter bids were requested and received for doing the work of canal construction by contract. None of them was found to be satisfactory and all were rejected. It is the unanimous opinion of the present Commission that the work can be done better, more cheaply, and more quickly by the Government than by private contractors. Fully 80 per cent of the entire plant needed for construction has been purchased or contracted for; machine shops have been erected and equipped for making all needed repairs to the plant; many thousands of employees have been secured; an effective organization has been perfected; a recruiting system is in operation which is capable of furnishing more labor than can be used advantageously; employees are well sheltered and well fed; salaries paid are satisfactory, and the work is not only going forward smoothly, but it is producing results far in advance of the most sanguine anticipations. Under these favorable conditions, a change in the method of prosecuting the work would be unwise and unjustifiable, for it would inevitably disorganize existing conditions, check progress, and increase the cost and lengthen the time of completing the Canal.

The chief engineer and all his professional associates are firmly convinced that the 85-foot level lock canal which they are constructing is the best that could be desired. Some of them had doubts on this point when they went to the Isthmus. As the plans have developed under their direction their doubts have been dispelled. While they may decide upon changes in detail as construction advances they are in hearty accord in approving the general plan. They believe that it provides a canal not only adequate to all demands that will be made upon it, but superior in every way to a sea-level canal. I concur in this belief.

POSTAL AFFAIRS.

I commend to the favorable consideration of the Congress a postal savings bank system, as recommended by the Postmaster-General. The primary object is to encourage among our people economy and thrift, and by the use of postal savings banks to give them an oportunity to husband their resources, particularly those who have not the facilities at hand for depositing their money in savings banks. Viewed, however, from the experience of the past few weeks, it is evident that the advantages of such an institution are still more far-reaching. Timid depositors have withdrawn their savings for the time being from national banks, trust companies, and savings banks; individuals have hoarded their cash and the workingmen their earnings; all of which money has been withheld and kept in hiding or in the safe deposit box to the detriment of prosperity. Through the agency of the postal savings banks such money would be restored to the channels of trade, to the mutual benefit of capital and labor.

I further commend to the Congress the consideration of the Postmaster-General's recommendation for an extension of the parcel post, especially on the rural routes. There are now 38,215 rural routes, serving nearly 15,000,000 people who do not have the advantages of the inhabitants of cities in obtaining their supplies. These recommendations have been drawn up to benefit the farmer and the country storekeeper; otherwise, I should not favor them, for I believe that it is good policy for our Government to do everything possible to aid the small town and the country district. It is desirable that the country merchant should not be crushed out.

The fourth-class postmasters' convention has passed a very strong resolution in favor of placing the fourth-class postmasters under the civil-service law. The Administration has already put into effect the policy of refusing to remove any fourth-class postmasters save for reasons connected with the good of the service; and it is endeavoring so far as possible to remove them from the domain of partisan politics. It would be a most desirable thing to put the fourth-class postmasters in the classified service. It is possible that this might be done without Congressional action, but, as the matter is debatable, I earnestly recommend that the Congress enact a law providing that they be included under the civil-service law and put in the classified service.

OKLAHOMA.

Oklahoma has become a State, standing on a full equality with her elder sisters, and her future is assured by her great natural resources. The duty of the National Government to guard the personal and property rights of the Indians within her borders remains of course unchanged.

ALASKA.

I reiterate my recommendations of last year as regards Alaska. Some form of local self-government should be provided, as simple and inexpensive as possible; it is imposible for the Congress to devote the necessary time to all the little details of necessary Alaskan legislation. Road building and railway building should be encouraged. The Governor of Alaska should be given an ample appropriation wherewith to organize a force to preserve the public peace. Whisky selling to the natives should be made a felony. The coal land laws should be changed so as to meet the peculiar needs of the Territory. This should be attended to at once; for the present laws permitting individuals to locate large areas of the public domain for speculative purposes; and cause an immense amount of trouble, fraud, and litigation. There should be another judicial division established. As early as possible light-houses and buoys should be established as aids to navigation, especially in and about Prince William Sound, and the survey of the coast completed. There is need of liberal appropriations for lighting and buoying the southern coast and improving the aids to navigation in southeastern Alaska. One of the great industries of Alaska, as of Puget Sound and the Columbia, is salmon fishing. Gradually, by reason of lack of proper laws, this industry is being ruined; it should now be taken in charge, and effectively protected, by the United States Government.

The courage and enterprise of the citizens of the far Northwest in their projected Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, to be held in 1909, should receive liberal encouragement. This exposition is not sentimental in its conception, but seeks to exploit the natural resources of Alaska and to promote the commerce, trade, and industry of the Pacific States with their neighboring States and with our insular possessions and the neighboring countries of the Pacific. The exposition asks no loan from the Congress but seeks appropriations for National exhibits and exhibits of the western dependencies of the General Government. The State of Washington and the city of Seattle have shown the characteristic western enterprise in large donations for the conduct of this exposition in which other States are lending generous assistance.

HAWAII.

The unfortunate failure of the shipping bill at the last session of the last Congress was followed by the taking off of certain Pacific steamships, which has greatly hampered the movement of passengers between Hawaii and the mainland. Unless the Congress is prepared by positive encouragement to secure proper facilities in the way of shipping between Hawaii and the mainland, then the coastwise shipping laws should be so far relaxed as to prevent Hawaii suffering as it is now suffering. I again call your attention to the capital importance from every standpoint of making Pearl Harbor available for the largest deep water vessels, and of suitably fortifying the island.

THE PHILIPPINES.

The Secretary of War has gone to the Philippines. On his return I shall submit to you his report on the islands.

PORTO RICO.

I again recommend that the rights of citizenship be conferred upon the people of Porto Rico.

MINING.

A bureau of mines should be created under the control and direction of the Secretary of the Interior; the bureau to have power to collect statistics and make investigations in all matters pertaining to mining and particularly to the accidents and dangers of the industry. If this can not now be done, at least additional appropriations should be given the Interior Department to be used for the study of mining conditions, for the prevention of fradulent mining schemes, for carrying on the work of mapping the mining districts, for studying methods for minimizing the accidents and dangers in the industry; in short, to aid in all proper ways the development of the mining industry.

THE HERMITAGE.

I strongly recommend to the Congress to provide funds for keeping up the Hermitage, the home of Andrew Jackson; these funds to be used through the existing Hermitage Association for the preservation of a historic building which should ever be dear to Americans.

VICKSBURG NATIONAL PARK.

I further recommend that a naval monument be established in the Vicksburg National Park. This national park gives a unique opportunity for commemorating the deeds of those gallant men who fought on water, no less than of those who fought on land, in the great civil war.

THE THIRTEENTH CENSUS.

Legislation should be enacted at the present session of the Congress for the Thirteenth Census. The establishment of the permanent Census Bureau affords the opportunity for a better census than we have ever had, but in order to realize the full advantage of the permanent organization, ample time must be given for preparation.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

There is a constantly growing interest in this country in the question of the public health. At last the public mind is awake to the fact that many diseases, notably tuberculosis, are National scourges. The work of the State and city boards of health should be supplemented by a constantly increasing interest on the part of the National Government. The Congress has already provided a bureau of public health and has provided for a hygienic laboratory. There are other valuable laws relating to the public health connected with the various departments. This whole branch of the Government should be strengthened and aided in every way.

GOVERNMENTAL COMMISSIONS.

I call attention to two Government commissions which I have appointed and which have already done excellent work. The first of these has to do with the organization of scientific work of the Government, which has grown up wholly without plan and is in consequence so unwisely distributed among the Executive Departments that much of its effect is lost for the lack of proper coordination. This commission's chief object is to introduce a planned and orderly development and operation in the place of the ill-assorted and often ineffective grouping and methods of work which have prevailed. This can not be done without legislation, nor would it be feasible to deal in detail with so complex an administrative problem by specific provisions of law. I recommend that the President be given authority to concentrate related lines of work and reduce duplication by Executive order through transfer and consolidation of lines of work.

The second committee, that on Department methods, was instructed to investigate and report upon the changes needed to place the conduct of the executive force of the Government on the most economical and effective basis in the light of the best modern business practice. The committee has made very satisfactory progress. Antiquated practices and bureaucratic ways have been abolished, and a general renovation of departmental methods has been inaugurated. All that can be done by Executive order has already been accomplished or will be put into effect in the near future. The work of the main committee and its several assistant committees has produced a wholesome awakening on the part of the great body of officers and employees engaged in Government work. In nearly every Department and office there has been a careful self-inspection for the purpose of remedying any defects before they could be made the subject of adverse criticism. This has led individuals to a wider study of the work on which they were engaged, and this study has resulted in increasing their efficiency in their respective lines of work. There are recommendations of special importance from the committee on the subject of personnel and the classification of salaries which will require legislative action before they can be put into effect. It is my intention to submit to the Congress in the near future a special message on those subjects.

PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN EXPENSES.

Under our form of government voting is not merely a right but a duty, and, moreover, a fundamental and necessary duty if a man is to be a good citizen. It is well to provide that corporations shall not contribute to Presidential or National compaigns, and furthermore to provide for the publication of both contributions and expenditures. There is, however, always danger in laws of this kind, which from their very nature are difficult of enforcement; the danger being lest they be obeyed only by the honest, and disobeyed by the unscrupulous, so as to act only as a penalty upon honest men. Moreover, no such law would hamper an unscrupulous man of unlimited means from buying his own way into office. There is a very radical measure which would, I believe, work a substantial improvement in our system of conducting a campaign, although I am well aware that it will take some time for people so to familiarize themselves with such a proposal as to be willing to consider its adoption. The need for collecting large campaign funds would vanish if Congress provided an appropriation for the proper and legitimate expenses of each of the great national parties, an appropriation ample enough to meet the necessity for thorough organization and machinery, which requires a large expenditure of money. Then the stipulation should be made that no party receiving campaign funds from the Treasury should accept more than a fixed amount from any individual subscriber or donor; and the necessary publicity for receipts and expenditures could without difficulty be provided.

A NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART.

There should be a National gallery of art established in the capital city of this country. This is important not merely to the artistic but to the material welfare of the country; and the people are to be congratulated on the fact that the movement to establish such a gallery is taking definite form under the guidance of the Smithsonian Institution. So far from there being a tariff on works of art brought into the country, their importation should be encouraged in every way. There have been no sufficient collections of objects of art by the Government, and what collections have been acquired are scattered and are generally placed in unsuitable and imperfectly lighted galleries.

THE BIOLOGICAL SURVEY.

The Biological Survey is quietly working for the good of our agricultural interests, and is an excellent example of a Government bureau which conducts original scientific research the findings of which are of much practical utility. For more than twenty years it has studied the food habits of birds and mammals that are injurious or beneficial to agriculture, horticulture, and forestry; has distributed illustrated bulletins on the subject, and has labored to secure legislative protection for the beneficial species. The cotton boll-weevil, which has recently overspread the cotton belt of Texas and is steadily extending its range, is said to cause an annual loss of about $3,000,000. The Biological Survey has ascertained and given wide publicity to the fact that at least 43 kinds of birds prey upon this destructive insect. It has discovered that 57 species of birds feed upon scale-insects—dreaded enemies of the fruit grower. It has shown that woodpeckers as a class, by destroying the larvæ of wood-boring insects, are so essential to tree life that it is doubtful if our forests could exist without them. It has shown that cuckoos and orioles are the natural enemies of the leaf-eating caterpillars that destroy our shade and fruit trees; that our quails and sparrows consume annually hundreds of tons of seeds of noxious weeds; that hawks and owls as a class (excepting the few that kill poultry and game birds) are markedly beneficial, spending their lives in catching grasshoppers, mice, and other pests that prey upon the products of husbandry. It has conducted field experiments for the purpose of devising and perfecting simple methods for holding in check the hordes of destructive rodents—rats, mice, rabbits, gophers, prairie dogs, and ground squirrels—which annually destroy crops worth many millions of dollars; and it has published practical directions for the destruction of wolves and coyotes on the stock ranges of the West, resulting during the past year in an estimated saving of cattle and sheep valued at upwards of a million dollars.

It has inaugurated a system of inspection at the principal ports of entry on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts by means of which the introduction of noxious mammals and birds is prevented, thus keeping out the mongoose and certain birds which are so much to be dreaded as the previously introduced English sparrow and the house rats and mice.

In the interest of game protection it has cooperated with local officials in every State in the Union, has striven to promote uniform legislation in the several States, has rendered important service in enforcing the Federal law regulating interstate traffic in game, and has shown how game protection may be made to yield a large revenue to the State—a revenue amounting in the case of Illinois to $128,000 in a single year.

The Biological Survey has explored the faunas and floras of America with reference to the distribution of animals and plants; it has defined and mapped the natural life areas—areas in which, by reason of prevailing climatic conditions, certain kinds of animals and plants occur—and has pointed out the adaptability of these areas to the cultivation of particular crops. The results of these investigations are not only of high educational value but are worth each year to the progressive farmers of the country many times the cost of maintaining the Survey, which, it may be added, is exceedingly small. I recommend to Congress that this bureau, whose usefulness is seriously handicapped by lack of funds, be granted an appropriation in some degree commensurate with the importance of the work it is doing.

OCEAN MAIL SERVICE.

I call your especial attention to the unsatisfactory condition of our foreign mail service, which, because of the lack of American steamship lines is now largely done through foreign lines, and which, particularly so far as South and Central America are concerned, is done in a manner which constitutes a serious barrier to the extension of our commerce.

The time has come, in my judgment, to set to work seriously to make our ocean mail service correspond more closely with our recent commercial and political development. A beginning was made by the ocean mail act of March 3, 1891, but even at that time the act was known to be inadequate in various particulars. Since that time events have moved rapidly in our history. We have acquired Hawaii, the Philippines, and lesser islands in the Pacific. We are steadily prosecuting the great work of uniting at the Isthmus the waters of the Atlantic and the Pacific. To a greater extent than seemed probable even a dozen years ago, we may look to an American future on the sea worthy of the traditions of our past. As the first step in that direction, and the step most feasible at the present time, I recommend the extension of the ocean mail act of 1891. That act has stood for some years free from successful criticism of its priniciple and purpose. It was based on theories of the obligations of a great maritime nation, undisputed in our own land and followed by other nations since the beginning of steam navigation. Briefly those theories are, that it is the duty of a first-class Power so far as practicable to carry its ocean mails under its own flag; that the fast ocean steamships and their crews, required for such mail service, are valuable auxiliaries to the sea power of a nation. Furthermore, the construction of such steamships insures the maintenance in an efficient condition of the shipyards in which our battleships must be built.

The expenditure of public money for the performance of such necessary functions of government is certainly warranted, nor is it necessary to dwell upon the incidental benefits to our foreign commercé, to the shipbuilding industry, and to ship owning and navigation which will accompany the discharge of these urgent public duties, though they, too, should have weight.

The only serious question is whether at this time we can afford to improve our ocean mail service as it should be improved. All doubt on this subject is removed by the reports of the Post-Office Department. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1907, that Department estimates that the postage collected on the articles exchanged with foreign countries other than Canada and Mexico amounted to $6,579,043.48, or $3,637,226.81 more than the net cost of the service exclusive of the cost of transporting the articles between the United States exchange postoffices and the United States postoffices at which they were mailed or delivered. In other words, the Government of the United States, having assumed a monopoly of carrying the mails for the people, is making a profit of over $3,600,000 by rendering a cheap and inefficient service. That profit I believe should be devoted to strengthening our maritime power in those directions where it will best promote our prestige. The country is familiar with the facts of our maritime impotence in the harbors of the great and friendly Republics of South America. Following the failure of the shipbuilding bill we lost our only American line of steamers to Australasia, and that loss on the Pacific has become a serious embarrassment to the people of Hawaii, and has wholly cut off the Samoan islands from regular communication with the Pacific coast. Puget Sound, in the year, has lost over half (four out of seven) of its American steamers trading with the Orient.

We now pay under the act of 1891 $4 a statute mile outward to 20-knot American mail steamships, built according to naval plans, available as cruisers, and manned by Americans. Steamships of that speed are confined exclusively to trans-Atlantic trade with New York. To steamships of 16 knots or over only $2 a mile can be paid, and it is steamships of this speed and type which are needed to meet the requirements of mail service to South America, Asia (including the Philippines), and Australia. I strongly recommend, therefore, a simple amendment to the ocean mail act of 1891 which shall authorize the Postmaster-General in his discretion to enter into contracts for the transportation of mails to the Republics of South America, to Asia, the Philippines, and Australia at a rate not to exceed $4 a mile for steamships of 16 knots speed or upwards, subject to the restrictions and obligations of the act of 1891. The profit of $3,600,000 which has been mentioned will fully cover the maximum annual expenditure involved in this recommendation, and it is believed will in time establish the lines so urgently needed. The proposition involves no new principle, but permits the efficient discharge of public functions now inadequately performed or not performed at all.

THE ARMY.

Not only there is not now, but there never has been, any other nation in the world so wholly free from the evils of militarism as is ours. There never has been any other large nation, not even China, which for so long a period has had relatively to its numbers so small a regular army as has ours. Never at any time in our history has this Nation suffered from militarism or been in the remotest danger of suffering from militarism. Never at any time of our history has the Regular Army been of a size which caused the slightest appreciable tax upon the taxpaying citizens of the Nation. Almost always it has been too small in size and underpaid. Never in our entire history has the Nation suffered in the least particular because too much care has been given to the Army, too much prominence given it, too much money spent upon it, or because it has been too large. But again and again we have suffered because enough care has not been given to it, because it has been too small, because there has not been sufficient preparation in advance for possible war. Every foreign war in which we have engaged has cost us many times the amount which, if wisely expended during the preceding years of peace on the Regular Army, would have insured the war ending in but a fraction of the time and but for a fraction of the cost that was actually the case. As a Nation we have always been shortsighted in providing for the efficiency of the Army in time of peace. It is nobody's especial interest to make such provision and no one looks ahead to war at any period, no matter how remote, as being a serious possibility; while an improper economy, or rather niggardliness, can be practiced at the expense of the Army with the certainty that those practicing it will not be called to account therefor, but that the price will be paid by the unfortunate persons who happen to be in office when a war does actually come.

I think it is only lack of foresight that troubles us, not any hostility to the Army. There are, of course, foolish people who denounce any care of the Army or Navy as "militarism," but I do not think that these people are numerous. This country has to contend now, and has had to contend in the past, with many evils, and there is ample scope for all who would work for reform. But there is not one evil that now exists, or that ever has existed in this country, which is, or ever has been, owing in the smallest part to militarism. Declamation against militarism has no more serious place in an earnest and intelligent movement for righteousness in this country than declamation against the worship of Baal or Astaroth. It is declamation against a nonexistent evil, one which never has existed in this country, and which has not the slightest chance of appearing here. We are glad to help in any movement for international peace, but this is because we sincerely believe that it is our duty to help all such movements provided they are sane and rational, and not because there is any tendency toward militarism on our part which needs to be cured. The evils we have to fight are those in connection with industrialism, not militarism. Industry is always necessary, just as war is sometimes necessary. Each has its price, and industry in the United States now exacts, and has always exacted, a far heavier toll of death than all our wars put together. The statistics of the railroads of this country for the year ended June 30, 1906, the last contained in the annual statistical report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, show in that one year a total of 108,324 casualties to persons, of which 10,618 represent the number of persons killed. In that wonderful hive of human activity, Pittsburg, the deaths due to industrial accidents in 1906 were 919, all the result of accidents in mills, mines or on railroads. For the entire country, therefore, it is safe to say that the deaths due to industrial accidents aggregate in the neighborhood of twenty thousand a year. Such a record makes the death rate in all our foreign wars utterly trivial by comparison. The number of deaths in battle in all the foreign wars put together, for the last century and a quarter, aggregate considerably less than one year's death record for our industries. A mere glance at these figures is sufficient to show the absurdity of the outcry against militarism.

But again and again in the past our little Regular Army has rendered service literally vital to the country, and it may at any time have to do so in the future. Its standard of efficiency and instruction is higher now than ever in the past. But it is too small. There are not enough officers; and it is impossible to secure enough enlisted men. We should maintain in peace a fairly complete skeleton of a large army. A great and long-continued war would have to be fought by volunteers. But months would pass before any large body of efficient volunteers could be put in the field, and our Regular Army should be large enough to meet any immediate need. In particular it is essential that we should possess a number of extra officers trained in peace to perform efficiently the duties urgently required upon the breaking out of war.

The Medical Corps should be much larger than the needs of our Regular Army in war. Yet at present it is smaller than the needs of the service demand even in peace. The Spanish war occurred less than ten years ago. The chief loss we suffered in it was by disease among the regiments which never left the country. At the moment the Nation seemed deeply impressed by this fact; yet seemingly it has already been forgotten, for not the slightest effort has been made to prepare a medical corps of sufficient size to prevent the repetition of the same disaster on a much larger scale if we should ever be engaged in a serious conflict. The trouble in the Spanish war was not with the then existing officials of the War Department; it was with the representatives of the people as a whole who, for the preceding thirty years, had declined to make the necessary provision for the Army. Unless ample provision is now made by Congress to put the Medical Corps where it should be put disaster in the next war is inevitable, and the responsibility will not lie with those then in charge of the War Department, but with those who now decline to make the necessary provision. A well-organized medical corps, thoroughly trained before the advent of war in all the important administrative duties of a military sanitary corps, is essential to the efficiency of any large army, and especially of a large volunteer army. Such knowledge of medicine and surgery as is possessed by the medical profession generally will not alone suffice to make an efficient military surgeon. He must have, in addition, knowledge of the administration and sanitation of large field hospitals and camps, in order to safeguard the health and lives of men intrusted in great numbers to his care. A bill has long been pending before the Congress for the reorganization of the Medical Corps; its passage is urgently needed.

But the Medical Department is not the only department for which increased provision should be made. The rate of pay for the officers should be greatly increased; there is no higher type of citizen than the American regular officer, and he should have a fair reward for his admirable work. There should be a relatively even greater increase in the pay for the enlisted men. Especial provision should be made for establishing grades equivalent to those of warrant officers in the Navy which should be open to the enlisted men who serve sufficiently long and who do their work well. Inducements should be offered sufficient to encourage really good men to make the Army a life occupation. The prime needs of our present Army is to secure and retain competent noncommissioned officers. This difficulty rests fundamentally on the question of pay. The noncommissioned officer does not correspond with an unskilled laborer; he corresponds to the best type of skilled workman or to the subordinate official in civil institutions. Wages have greatly increased in outside occupations in the last forty years and the pay of the soldier, like the pay of the officers, should be proportionately increased. The first sergeant of a company, if a good man, must be one of such executive and administrative ability, and such knowledge of his trade, as to be worth far more than we at present pay him. The same is true of the regimental sergeant major. These men should be men who had fully resolved to make the Army a life occupation and they should be able to look forward to ample reward; while only men properly qualified should be given a chance to secure these final rewards. The increase over the present pay need not be great in the lower grades for the first one or two enlistments, but the increase should be marked for the noncommissioned officers of the upper grades who serve long enough to make it evident that they intend to stay permanently in the Army, while additional pay should be given for high qualifications in target practice. The position of warrant officer should be established and there should be not only an increase of pay, but an increase of privileges and allowances and dignity, so as to make the grade open to noncommissioned officers capable of filling them desirably from every standpoint. The rate of desertion in our Army now in time of peace is alarming. The deserter should be treated by public opinion as a man guilty of the greatest crime; while on the other hand the man who serves steadily in the Army should be treated as what he is, that is, as preeminently one of the best citizens of this Republic. After twelve years' service in the Army my own belief is that the man should be given a preference according to his ability for certain types of office over all civilian applicants without examination. This should also apply, of course, to the men who have served twelve years in the Navy. A special corps should be provided to do the manual labor now necessarily demanded of the privates themselves.

Among the officers there should be severe examinations to weed out the unfit up to the grade of major. From that position on appointments should be solely by selection and it should be understood that a man of merely average capacity could never get beyond the position of major, while every man who serves in any grade a certain length of time prior to promotion to the next grade without getting the promotion to the next grade should be forthwith retired. The practice marches and field maneuvers of the last two or three years have been invaluable to the Army. They should be continued and extended. A rigid and not a perfunctory examination of physical capacity has been provided for the higher grade officers. This will work well. Unless an officer has a good physique, unless he can stand hardship, ride well, and walk fairly, he is not fit for any position, even after he has become a colonel. Before he has become a colonel the need for physical fitness in the officer is almost as great as in the enlisted man. I hope speedily to see introduced into the Army a far more rigid and thoroughgoing test of horsemanship for all field officers than at present. There should be a Chief of Cavalry just as there is a Chief of Artillery.

Perhaps the most important of all legislation needed for the benefit of the Army is a law to equalize and increase the pay of officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Revenue-Cutter Service. Such a bill has been prepared, which it is hoped will meet with your favorable consideration. The next most essential measure is to authorize a number of extra officers as mentioned above. To make the Army more attractive to enlisted men, it is absolutely essential to create a service corps, such as exists in nearly every modern army in the world, to do the skilled and unskilled labor, inseparably connected with military administration, which is now exacted, without just compensation, of enlisted men who voluntarily entered the Army to do service of an altogether different kind. There are a number of other laws necessary to so organize the Army as to promote its efficiency and facilitate its rapid expansion in time of war; but the above are the most important.

THE NAVY.

It was hoped The Hague Conference might deal with the question of the limitation of armaments. But even before it had assembled informal inquiries had developed that as regards naval armaments, the only ones in which this country had any interest, it was hopeless to try to devise any plan for which there was the slightest possibility of securing the assent of the nations gathered at The Hague. No plan was even proposed which would have had the assent of more than one first class Power outside of the United States. The only plan that seemed at all feasible, that of limiting the size of battleships, met with no favor at all. It is evident, therefore, that it is folly for this Nation to base any hope of securing peace on any international agreement as to the limitation of armaments. Such being the fact it would be most unwise for us to stop the upbuilding of our Navy. To build one battleship of the best and most advanced type a year would barely keep our fleet up to its present force. This is not enough. In my judgment, we should this year provide for four battleships. But it is idle to build battleships unless in addition to providing the men, and the means for thorough training, we provide the auxiliaries for them, unless we provide docks, the coaling stations, the colliers and supply ships that they need. We are extremely deficient in coaling stations and docks on the Pacific, and this deficiency should not longer be permitted to exist. Plenty of torpedo boats and destroyers should be built. Both on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, fortifications of the best type should be provided for all our greatest harbors.

We need always to remember that in time of war the Navy is not to be used to defend harbors and sea-coast cities; we should perfect our system of coast fortifications. The only efficient use for the Navy is for offense. The only way in which it can efficiently protect our own coast against the possible action of a foreign navy is by destroying that foreign navy. For defense against a hostile fleet which actually attacks them, the coast cities must depend upon their forts, mines, torpedoes, submarines, and torpedo boats and destroyers. All of these together are efficient for defensive purposes, but they in no way supply the place of a thoroughly efficient navy capable of acting on the defensive; for parrying never yet won a fight. It can only be won by hard hitting, and an aggressive sea-going navy alone can do this hard hitting of the offensive type. But the forts and the like are necessary so that the Navy may be footloose. In time of war there is sure to be demand, under pressure of fright, for the ships to be scattered so as to defend all kinds of ports. Under penalty of terrible disaster, this demand must be refused. The ships must be kept together, and their objective made the enemies' fleet. If fortifications are sufficiently strong, no modern navy will venture to attack them, so long as the foe has in existence a hostile navy of anything like the same size or efficiency. But unless there exists such a navy then the fortifications are powerless by themselves to secure the victory. For of course the mere deficiency means that any resolute enemy can at his leisure combine all his forces upon one point with the certainty that he can take it.

Until our battle fleet is much larger than at present it should never be split into detachments so far apart that they could not in event of emergency be speedily united. Our coast line is on the Pacific just as much as on the Atlantic. The interests of California, Oregon, and Washington are as emphatically the interests of the whole Union as those of Maine and New York, of Louisiana and Texas. The battle fleet should now and then be moved to the Pacific, just as at other times it should be kept in the Atlantic. When the Isthmian Canal is built the transit of the battle fleet from one ocean to the other will be comparatively easy. Until it is built I earnestly hope that the battle fleet will be thus shifted between the two oceans every year or two. The marksmanship on all our ships has improved phenomenally during the last five years. Until within the last two or three years it was not possible to train a battle fleet in squadron maneuvers under service conditions, and it is only during these last two or three years that the training under these conditions has become really effective. Another and most necessary stride in advance is now being taken. The battle fleet is about starting by the Straits of Magellan to visit the Pacific coast. Sixteen battleships are going under the command of Rear-Admiral Evans, while eight armored cruisers and two other battleships will meet him at San Francisco, whither certain torpedo destroyers are also going. No fleet of such size has ever made such a voyage, and it will be of very great educational use to all engaged in it. The only way by which to teach officers and men how to handle the fleet so as to meet every possible strain and emergency in time of war is to have them practice under similar conditions in time of peace. Moreover, the only way to find out our actual needs is to perform in time of peace whatever maneuvers might be necessary in time of war. After war is declared it is too late to find out the needs; that means to invite disaster. This trip to the Pacific will show what some of our needs are and will enable us to provide for them. The proper place for an officer to learn his duty is at sea, and the only way in which a navy can ever be made efficient is by practice at sea, under all the conditions which would have to be met if war existed.

I bespeak the most liberal treatment for the officers and enlisted men of the Navy. It is true of them, as likewise of the officers and enlisted men of the Army, that they form a body whose interests should be close to the heart of every good American. In return the most rigid performance of duty should be exacted from them. The reward should be ample when they do their best; and nothing less than their best should be tolerated. It is idle to hope for the best results when the men in the senior grades come to those grades late in life and serve too short a time in them. Up to the rank of lieutenant-commander promotion in the Navy should be as now, by seniority, subject, however, to such rigid tests as would eliminate the unfit. After the grade of lieutenant-commander, that is, when we come to the grade of command rank, the unfit should be eliminated in such manner that only the conspicuously fit would remain, and sea service should be a principal test of fitness. Those who are passed by should, after a certain length of service in their respective grades, be retired. Of a given number of men it may well be that almost all would make good lieutenants and most of them good lieutenant-commanders, while only a minority will be fit to be captains, and but three or four to be admirals. Those who object to promotion otherwise than by mere seniority should reflect upon the elementary fact that no business in private life could be successfully managed if those who enter at the lowest rungs of the ladder should each in turn, if he lived, become the head of the firm, its active director, and retire after he had held the position a few months. On its face such a scheme is an absurdity. Chances for improper favoritism can be minimized by a properly formed board; such as the board of last June, which did such conscientious and excellent work in elimination.

If all that ought to be done can not now be done, at least let a beginning be made. In my last three annual Messages, and in a special Message to the last Congress, the necessity for legislation that will cause officers of the line of the Navy to reach the grades of captain and rear-admiral at less advanced ages and which will cause them to have more sea training and experience in the highly responsible duties of those grades, so that they may become thoroughly skillful in handling battleships, divisions, squadrons, and fleets in action, has been fully explained and urgently recommended. Upon this subject the Secretary of the Navy has submitted detailed and definite recommendations which have received my approval, and which, if enacted into law, will accomplish what is immediately necessary, and will, as compared with existing law, make a saving of more than five millions of dollars during the next seven years. The navy personnel act of 1899 has accomplished all that was expected of it in providing satisfactory periods of service in the several subordinate grades, from the grade of ensign to the grade of lieutenant-commander, but the law is inadequate in the upper grades and will continue to be inadequate on account of the expansion of the personnel since its enactment. Your attention is invited to the following quotations from the report of the personnel board of 1906, of which the Assistant Secretary of the Navy was president:

"Congress has authorized a considerable increase in the number of midshipmen at the Naval Academy, and these midshipmen upon graduation are promoted to ensign and lieutenant (junior grade). But no provision has been made for a corresponding increase in the upper grades, the result being that the lower grades will become so congested that a midshipman now in one of the lowest classes at Annapolis may possibly not be promoted to lieutenant until he is between 45 and 50 years of age. So it will continue under the present law, congesting at the top and congesting at the bottom. The country fails to get from the officers of the service the best that is in them by not providing opportunity for their normal development and training. The board believes that this works a serious detriment to the efficiency of the Navy and is a real menace to the public safety."

As stated in my special Message to the last Congress: "I am firmly of the opinion that unless the present conditions of the higher commissioned personnel is rectified by judicious legislation the future of our Navy will be gravely compromised." It is also urgently necessary to increase the efficiency of the Medical Corps of the Navy. Special legislation to this end has already been proposed; and I trust it may be enacted without delay.

It must be remembered that everything done in the Navy to fit it to do well in time of war must be done in time of peace. Modern wars are short; they do not last the length of time requisite to build a battleship; and it takes longer to train the officers and men to do well on a battleship than it takes to build it. Nothing effective can be done for the Navy once war has begun, and the result of the war, if the combatants are otherwise equally matched, will depend upon which power has prepared best in time of peace. The United States Navy is the best guaranty the Nation has that its honor and interest will not be neglected; and in addition it offers by far the best insurance for peace that can by human ingenuity be devised.

I call attention to the report of the official Board of Visitors to the Naval Academy at Annapolis which has been forwarded to the Congress. The report contains this paragraph:

"Such revision should be made of the courses of study and methods of conducting and marking examinations as will develop and bring out the average all-round ability of the midshipman rather than to give him prominence in any one particular study. The fact should be kept in mind that the Naval Academy is not a university but a school, the primary object of which is to educate boys to be efficient naval officers. Changes in curriculum, therefore, should be in the direction of making the course of instruction less theoretical and more practical. No portion of any future class should be graduated in advance of the full four years' course, and under no circumstances should the standard of instruction be lowered. The Academy in almost all of its departments is now magnificently equipped, and it would be very unwise to make the course of instruction less exacting than it is to-day."

Acting upon this suggestion I designated three seagoing officers, Capt. Richard Wainwright, Commander Robert S. Griffin, and Lieut. Commander Albert L. Key, all graduates of the Academy, to investigate conditions and to recommend to me the best method of carrying into effect this general recommendation. These officers performed the duty promptly and intelligently, and, under the personal direction of Capt. Charles J. Badger, Superintendent of the Academy, such of the proposed changes as were deemed to be at present advisable were put into effect at the beginning of the academic year, October 1, last. The results, I am confident, will be most beneficial to the Academy, to the midshipmen, and to the Navy.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

In foreign affairs this country's steady policy is to behave toward other nations as a strong and self-respecting man should behave toward the other men with whom he is brought into contact. In other words, our aim is disinterestedly to help other nations where such help can be wisely given without the appearance of meddling with what does not concern us; to be careful to act as a good neighbor; and at the same time, in good-natured fashion, to make it evident that we do not intend to be imposed upon.

THE HAGUE.

The Second International Peace Conference was convened at The Hague on the 15th of June last and remained in session until the 18th of October. For the first time the representatives of practically all the civilized countries of the world united in a temperate and kindly discussion of the methods by which the causes of war might be narrowed and its injurious effects reduced.

Although the agreements reached in the Conference did not in any direction go to the length hoped for by the more sanguine, yet in many directions important steps were taken, and upon every subject on the programme there was such full and considerate discussion as to justify the belief that substantial progress has been made toward further agreements in the future. Thirteen conventions were agreed upon embodying the definite conclusions which had been reached, and resolutions were adopted marking the progress made in matters upon which agreement was not yet sufficiently complete to make conventions practicable.

The delegates of the United States were instructed to favor an agreement for obligatory arbitration, the establishment of a permanent court of arbitration to proceed judicially in the hearing and decision of international causes, the prohibition of force for the collection of contract debts alleged to be due from governments to citizens of other countries until after arbitration as to the justice and amount of the debt and the time and manner of payment, the immunity of private property at sea, the better definition of the rights of neutrals, and, in case any measure to that end should be introduced, the limitation of armaments.

In the field of peaceful disposal of international differences several important advances were made. First, as to obligatory arbitration. Although the Conference failed to secure a unanimous agreement upon the details of a convention for obligatory arbitration, it did resolve as follows:

"It is unanimous: (1) In accepting the principle for obligatory arbitration; (2) In declaring that certain differences, and notably those relating to the interpretation and application of international conventional stipulations are susceptible of being submitted to obligatory arbitration without any restriction."

In view of the fact that as a result of the discussion the vote upon the definite treaty of obligatory arbitration, which was proposed, stood 32 in favor to 9 against the adoption of the treaty, there can be little doubt that the great majority of the countries of the world have reached a point where they are now ready to apply practically the principles thus unanimously agreed upon by the Conference.

The second advance, and a very great one, is the agreement which relates to the use of force for the collection of contract debts. Your attention is invited to the paragraphs upon this subject in my Message of December, 1906, and to the resolution of the Third American Conference at Rio in the summer of 1906. The convention upon this subject adopted by the Conference substantially as proposed by the American delegates is as folows:

"In order to avoid between nations armed conflicts of a purely pecuniary origin arising from contractual debts claimed of the government of one country by the government of another country to be due to its nationals, the signatory Powers agree not to have recourse to armed force for the collection of such contractual debts.

"However, this stipulation shall not be applicable when the debtor State refuses or leaves unanswered an offer to arbitrate, or, in case of acceptance, makes it impossible to formulate the terms of submission, or, after arbitration, fails to comply with the award rendered.

"It is further agreed that arbitration here contemplated shall be in conformity, as to procedure, with Chapter III of the Convention for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes adopted at The Hague, and that it shall determine, in so far as there shall be no agreement between the parties, the justice and the amount of the debt, the time and mode of payment thereof."

Such a provision would have prevented much injustice and extortion in the past, and I cannot doubt that its effect in the future will be most salutary.

A third advance has been made in amending and perfecting the convention of 1899 for the voluntary settlement of international disputes, and particularly the extension of those parts of that convention which relate to commissions of inquiry. The existence of those provisions enabled the Governments of Great Britain and Russia to avoid war, notwithstanding great public excitement, at the time of the Dogger Bank incident, and the new convention agreed upon by the Conference gives practical effect to the experience gained in that inquiry.

Substantial progress was also made towards the creation of a permanent judicial tribunal for the determination of international causes. There was very full discussion of the proposal for such a court and a general agreement was finally reached in favor of its creation. The Conference recommended to the signatory Powers the adoption of a draft upon which it agreed for the organization of the court, leaving to be determined only the method by which the judges should be selected. This remaining unsettled question is plainly one which time and good temper will solve.

A further agreement of the first importance was that for the creation of an international prize court. The constitution, organization and procedure of such a tribunal were provided for in detail. Anyone who recalls the injustices under which this country suffered as a neutral power during the early part of the last century can not fail to see in this provision for an international prize court the great advance which the world is making towards the substitution of the rule of reason and justice in place of simple force. Not only will the international prize court be the means of protecting the interests of neutrals, but it is in itself a step towards the creation of the more general court for the hearing of international controversies to which reference has just been made. The organization and action of such a prize court can not fail to accustom the different countries to the submission of international questions to the decision of an international tribunal, and we may confidently expect the results of such submission to bring about a general agreement upon the enlargement of the practice.

Numerous provisions were adopted for reducing the evil effects of war and for defining the rights and duties of neutrals.

The Conference also provided for the holding of a third Conference within a period similar to that which elapsed between the First and Second Conferences.

The delegates of the United States worthily represented the spirit of the American people and maintained with fidelity and ability the policy of our Government upon all the great questions discussed in the Conference.

The report of the delegation, together with authenticated copies of the conventions signed, when received, will be laid before the Senate for its consideration.

When we remember how difficult it is for one of our own legislative bodies, composed of citizens of the same country, speaking the same language, living under the same laws, and having the same customs, to reach an agreement, or even to secure a majority upon any difficult and important subject which is proposed for legislation, it becomes plain that the representatives of forty-five different countries, speaking many different languages, accustomed to different methods of procedure, with widely diverse interests, who discussed so many different subjects and reached agreements upon so many, are entitled to grateful appreciation for the wisdom, patience, and moderation with which they have discharged their duty. The example of this temporate discussion, and the agreements and the efforts to agree, among representatives of all the nations of the earth, acting with universal recognition of the supreme obligation to promote peace, can not fail to be a powerful influence for good in future international relations.

CUBA.

A year ago in consequence of a revolutionary movement in Cuba which threatened the immediate return to chaos of the island, the United States intervened, sending down an army and establishing a provisional government under Governor Magoon. Absolute quiet and prosperity have returned to the island because of this action. We are now taking steps to provide elections in the island and our expectation is within the coming year to be able to turn the island over again to a government chosen by the people thereof. Cuba is at our doors. It is not possible that this Nation should permit Cuba again to sink into the condition from which we rescued it. All that we ask of the Cuban people is that they be prosperous, that they govern themselves so as to bring content, order and progress to their island, the Queen of the Antilles; and our only interference has been and will be to help them achieve these results.

THE JAPANESE EXPOSITION.

An invitation has been extended by Japan to the Government and people of the United States to participate in a great national exposition to be held at Tokyo from April 1 to October 31, 1912, and in which the principal countries of the world are to be invited to take part. This is an occasion of special interest to all the nations of the world, and peculiarly so to us; for it is the first instance in which such a great national exposition has been held by a great power dwelling on the Pacific; and all the nations of Europe and America will, I trust, join in helping to success this first great exposition ever held by a great nation of Asia. The geographical relations of Japan and the United States as the possessors of such large portions of the coasts of the Pacific, the intimate trade relations already existing between the two countries, the warm friendship which has been maintained between them without break since the opening of Japan to intercourse with the western nations, and her increasing wealth and production, which we regard with hearty goodwill and wish to make the occasion of mutually beneficial commerce, all unite in making it eminently desirable that this invitation should be accepted. I heartily recommend such legislation as will provide in generous fashion for the representative of this Government and its people in the proposed exposition. Action should be taken now. We are apt to underestimate the time necessary for preparation in such cases. The invitation to the French Exposition of 1900 was brought to the attention of the Congress by President Cleveland in December, 1895; and so many are the delays necessary to such proceedings that the period of four years and a half which then intervened before the exposition proved none too long for the proper preparation of the exhibits.

GERMAN TARIFF AGREEMENT.

The adoption of a new tariff by Germany, acompanied by conventions for reciprocal tariff concessions between that country and most of the other countries of continental Europe, led the German Government to give the notice necessary to terminate the reciprocal commercial agreement with this country proclaimed July 13, 1900. The notice was to take effect on the 1st of March, 1906, and in default of some other arrangements this would have left the exports from the United States to Germany subject to the general German tariff duties, from 25 to 50 per cent higher than the conventional duties imposed upon the goods of most of our competitors for German trade.

Under a special agreement made between the two Governments in February, 1906, the German Government postponed the operation of their notice until the 30th of June, 1907. In the meantime, deeming it to be my duty to make every possible effort to prevent a tariff war between the United States and Germany arising from misunderstanding by either country of the conditions existing in the other, and acting upon the invitation of the German Government, I sent to Berlin a commission composed of competent experts in the operation and administration of the customs tariff, from the Departments of the Treasury and Commerce and Labor. This commission was engaged for several months in conference with a similar commission appointed by the German Government, under instructions, so far as practicable, to reach a common understanding as to all the facts regarding the tariffs of the United States and Germany material and relevant to the trade relations between the two countries. The commission reported, and upon the basis of the report, a further temporary commercial agreement was entered into by the two countries, pursuant to which, in the exercise of the authority conferred upon the President by the third section of the Tariff act of July 24, 1897, I extended the reduced tariff rates provided for in that section to champagne and all other sparkling wines, and pursuant to which the German conventional or minimum tariff rates were extended to about 96½ per cent of all the exports from the United States to Germany. This agreement is to remain in force until the 30th of June, 1908, and until six months after notice by either party to terminate it.

The agreement and the report of the commission on which it is based will be laid before the Congress for its information.

This careful examination into the tariff relations between the United States and Germany involved an inquiry into certain of our methods of administration which had been the cause of much complaint on the part of German exporters. In this inquiry I became satisfied that certain vicious and unjustifiable practices had grown up in our customs administration, notably the practice of determining values of imports upon detective reports never disclosed to the persons whose interests were affected. The use of detectives, though often necessary, tends towards abuse, and should be carefully guarded. Under our practice as I found it to exist in this case, the abuse had become gross and discreditable. Under it, instead of seeking information as to the market value of merchandise from the well-known and respected members of the commercial community in the country of its production, secret statements were obtained from informers and discharged employees and business rivals, and upon this kind of secret evidence the values of imported goods were frequently raised and heavy penalties were frequently imposed upon importers who were never permitted to know what the evidence was and who never had an opportunity to meet it. It is quite probable that this system tended towards an increase of the duties collected upon imported goods, but I conceive it to be a violation of law to exact more duties than the law provides, just as it is a violation to admit goods upon the payment of less than the legal rate of duty. This practice was repugnant to the spirit of American law and to American sense of justice. In the judgment of the most competent experts of the Treasury Department and the Department of Commerce and Labor it was wholly unnecessary for the due collection of the customs revenues, and the attempt to defend it merely illustrates the demoralization which naturally follows from a long-continued course of reliance upon such methods. I accordingly caused the regulations governing this branch of the customs service to be modified so that values are determined upon a hearing in which all the parties interested have an opportunity to be heard and to know the evidence against them. Moreover our Treasury agents are accredited to the government of the country in which they seek information, and in Germany receive the assistance of the quasi-official chambers of commerce in determining the actual market value of goods, in accordance with what I am advised to be the true construction of the law.

These changes of regulations were adapted to the removal of such manifest abuses that I have not felt that they ought to be confined to our relations with Germany; and I have extended their operation to all other countries which have expressed a desire to enter into similar administrative relations.

CHINA.

I ask for authority to re-form the agreement with China under which the indemnity of 1900 was fixed, by remitting and canceling the obligation of China for the payment of all that part of the stipulated indemnity which is in excess of the sum of eleven million six hundred and fifty-five thousand four hundred and ninety-two dollars and sixty-nine cents, and interest at four per cent. After the rescue of the foreign legations in Peking during the Boxer troubles in 1900 the Powers required from China the payment of equitable indemnities to the several nations, and the final protocol under which the troops were withdrawn, signed at Peking, September 7, 1901, fixed the amount of this indemnity allotted to the United States at over $20,000,000, and China paid, up to and including the 1st day of June, last, a little over $6,000,000. It was the first intention of this Government at the proper time, when all claims had been presented and all expenses ascertained as fully as possible, to revise the estimates and account, and as a proof of sincere friendship for China voluntarily to release that country from its legal liability for all payments in excess of the sum which should prove to be necessary for actual indemnity to the United States and its citizens.

CHINESE STUDENTS.

This Nation should help in every practicable way in the education of the Chinese people, so that the vast and populous Empire of China may gradually adapt itself to modern conditions. One way of doing this is by promoting the coming of Chinese students to this country and making it attractive to them to take courses at our universities and higher educational institutions. Our educators should, so far as possible, take concerted action toward this end.

MEXICO AND CENTRAL AMERICA.

On the courteous invitation of the President of Mexico, the Secretary of State visited that country in September and October and was received everywhere with the greatest kindness and hospitality.

He carried from the Government of the United States to our southern neighbor a message of respect and good will and of desire for better acquaintance and increasing friendship. The response from the Government and the people of Mexico was hearty and sincere. No pains were spared to manifest the most friendly attitude and feeling toward the United States.

In view of the close neighborhood of the two countries the relations which exist between Mexico and the United States are just cause for gratification. We have a common boundary of over 1,500 miles from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific. Much of it is marked only by the shifting waters of the Rio Grande. Many thousands of Mexicans are residing upon our side of the line and it is estimated that over 40,000 Americans are resident in Mexican territory and that American investments in Mexico amount to over seven hundred million dollars. The extraordinary industrial and commercial prosperity of Mexico has been greatly promoted by American enterprise, and Americans are sharing largely in its results. The foreign trade of the Republic already exceeds $240,000,000 per annum, and of this two-thirds both of exports and imports are exchanged with the United States. Under these circumstances numerous questions necessarily arise between the two countries. These questions are always approached and disposed of in a spirit of mutual courtesy and fair dealing. Americans carrying on business in Mexico testify uniformly to the kindness and consideration with which they are treated and their sense of the security of their property and enterprises under the wise administration of the great statesman who has so long held the office of Chief Magistrate of that Republic.

The two Governments have been uniting their efforts for a considerable time past to aid Central America in attaining the degree of peace and order which have made possible the prosperity of the northern parts of the Continent. After the peace between Guatemala, Honduras, and Salvador, celebrated under the circumstances described in my last Message, a new war broke out between the Republic of Nicaragua, Honduras, and Salvador. The effort to compose this new difficulty has resulted in the acceptance of the joint suggestion of the Presidents of Mexico and of the United States for a general peace conference between all the countries of Central America. On the 17th day of September last a protocol was signed between the representatives of the five Central American countries accredited to this Government agreeing upon a conference to be held in the City of Washington "in order to devise the means of preserving the good relations among said Republics and bringing about permanent peace in those countries." The protocol includes the expression of a wish that the Presidents of the United States and Mexico should appoint "representatives to lend their good and impartial offices in a purely friendly way toward the realization of the objects of the conefrence." The conference is now in session and will have our best wishes and, where it is practicable, our friendly assistance.

INTERNATIONAL BUREAU OF AMERICAN REPUBLICS.

One of the results of the Pan American conference at Rio Janeiro in the summer of 1906 has been a great increase in the activity and usefulness of the International Bureau of American Republics. That institution, which includes all the American Republics in its membership and brings all their representatives together, is doing a really valuable work in informing the people of the United States about the other Republics and in making the United States known to them. Its action is now limited by appropriations determined when it was doing a work on a much smaller scale and rendering much less valuable service. I recommend that the contribution of this Government to the expenses of the Bureau be made commensurate with its increased work.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, it is perhaps just as well that we should consume the time in the opening days of the session in this way, but I call the attention of Senators to Rule 7, paragraph 2, which would save a great deal of time, for we need not consume so much in sitting and listening to the clerks read the titles of bills, as there is provision made for their introduction in another way. With the permission of the Chair, I will read the rule to which I refer:

Senators having petitions, memorials, pension bills, bills for the payment of private claims or for the correction of naval or military records to present after the morning hour may deliver them to the Secretary of the Senate, indorsing upon them their name and the reference or disposition to be made thereof, and said petitions, memorials, and bills shall, with the approval of the Presiding Officer, be entered on the Journal with the names of the Senators presenting them as having been read twice and referred to the appropriate committees, and the Secretary of the Senate shall furnish a transcript of such entries to the Official Reporter of Debates for publication in the RECORD.

It is very evident that we are going to have an immense amount of this class of business, and I suggest that we might save the time of Senators and let them go about something else, in attendance on committees or working on matters such as all have in charge, instead of consuming so much time in this way. I merely make the suggestion for what it is worth.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The rule applies to the presentation after the morning hour of petitions and the introduction of bills of the classes named.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I fear I was not understood a little while ago, and I take the liberty of pointing out that while the Chair is entirely correct that the method provided by the rule can only be pursued as to certain bills and after the morning hour, yet Senators who are willing to help to save our time could withhold all the class of bills designated in the rule until after the morning hour, and then we would get rid of this hour and a half or two hours of listening to the clerks read the titles of bills, bills, bills. Nobody has been thinking about them or caring anything about them or will care anything about them until they get to the committees. The titles of the bills will go in the RECORD, and that is as far as most persons care about them anyhow, I suppose, because the committees will take care of the measures after they get charge of them.

I suggest again that it will save an immense amount of time if Senators will only present in the morning hour such bills as are required to be presented then, and introduce the others after the morning hour.

WATERWAY FROM THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TO THE ATLANTIC.

Mr. BACON introduced a bill (S. 754) for ascertaining the feasibility and probable cost of constructing a canal from the Tennessee River, at or near the city of Chattanooga, in the State of Tennessee, to the navigable waters of the Ocmulgee River, in the State of Georgia, by which there will be furnished adequate water communication by the shortest and most practicable route between the Atlantic Ocean and the navigable waters in the rivers of the Mississippi Valley, which was read the first time by its title.

Mr. BACON. The bill is very short, and I ask that it be read in full.

The bill was read the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be made accurate surveys, examinations, and final estimates of cost of construction of a canal from the Tennessee River, at or near the city of Chattanooga, in the State of Tennessee, to the navigable waters of the Ocmulgee River, in the State of Georgia, by which, if practicable, there will be furnished adequate water communication by the shortest and most practicable route between the Atlantic Ocean and the navigable waters of the rivers of the Mississippi Valley, said canal to be of sufficient capacity for the safe and convenient passage of boats drawing 5 feet of water, and to be authorized to cross or intersect and utilize the waters of all navigable waters of the rivers along the route of said canal; and that the sum of $75,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary therefor, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated to defray the expenses of such survey and estimates.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, before the bill is referred I desire to say a word.

The bill is a copy of one which I introduced in the Senate twelve years ago, in December, 1895. The purpose of it, as disclosed by the reading, is to furnish a navigable waterway which shall connect the waters of the rivers of the Mississippi Valley with the Atlantic Ocean. At the time of its introduction it seemed that the public sentiment was not ripe for it. It is possible that conditions then did not demand it. At any rate, it did not receive the favorable action of Congress. I believe conditions have changed——

Mr. McCREARY. Mr. President——

Mr. BACON. I hope the Senator from Kentucky will pardon me for a moment.

Mr. McCREARY. I merely wish to ask a question.

Mr. BACON. I will yield when I get through. I shall take but a moment.

I think conditions have changed, and that if the project is feasible it will receive the support of the people of the country.

The route which it is proposed to utilize is practically the only possible one by which water communication can be had between the waters of the Mississippi Valley and the Atlantic Ocean by a canal which will be free from ice and open to navigation during the entire year. If it is feasible—and I have very great confidence that the survey will prove it is so—the immense value of the construction of such a work to the commerce of this country is almost beyond estimate. When we consider the immense area of country permeated by the water system of the Mississippi Valley and the vast importance that it should have the most direct means of transportation of its products to the Atlantic Ocean, it is indeed difficult to overestimate the vast importance of the construction of such a work.

I trust that in the consideration of the bill due weight will be given not only to the present importance of the project, but to the incalculable influence which such a waterway would have in the future in the immeasurable development which awaits the great interior of this country in enterprises that will demand the utilization of such a waterway for the transportation of products to the Atlantic Ocean.

Now I yield with pleasure to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. McCREARY. I desire to ask the Senator from Georgia how many miles in length the proposed waterway will be?

Mr. BACON. Something over a hundred miles. I can not state it more accurately to the Senator.

Mr. McCREARY. About the length of the Suez Canal?

Mr. BACON. Yes; the Suez Canal is eighty-odd miles long.

Mr. McCREARY. One hundred and four.

Mr. BACON. One hundred and four?

Mr. McCREARY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BACON. I stand corrected. Possibly the Senator includes in that the part of the canal which utilizes a lake.

Mr. McCREARY. The whole distance.

Mr. BACON. I think the Suez Canal proper is some eighty-odd miles in length, but it utilizes about midway a considerable lake, which is, of course, a part of the canal in one sense and not in another.

Mr. McCREARY. The distance between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, if I remember correctly, is 104 miles. It is possible it does include a lake.

Mr. BACON. I am very sure there is a lake included.

Mr. McCREARY. Yes.

Mr. BACON. I am not certain but that the Senator is correct, that the canal is 104 miles in length. But my recollection is that the canal in excavation is some eighty-odd miles. But, of course, for that I do not propose to vouch. I do know that there is a lake situated about midway the canal between Port Said and Suez.

I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The motion was agreed to.

FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

Mr. CLAY. I submit a resolution, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, directed to report to the Senate the name and location of each and every national bank designated as a United States depository, together with the total amount of money deposited in each of said banks by the United States during the year 1907.

He is also directed to report the total amount of money deposited in each of said banks by States at the present time; also the bonded indebtedness of the United States, the rate of interest said indebtedness bears, and he is directed to report what amount of said indebtedness the United States is at liberty to pay off before maturity and the amount of surplus in the Treasury of the United States, which shall include the amount of cash now on hand and the amount deposited in national banks.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. KEAN. In the absence of the chairman of the Committee on Finance, I suggest that the resolution go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over.

FUNERAL EXPENSES OF THE LATE SENATORS MORGAN AND PETTUS.

Mr. KEAN submitted the following resolution, which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay from the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate the actual and necessary expenses incurred by the committees appointed by the Vice-President in arranging for and attending the funerals of the late Senators from the State of Alabama, Hon. JOHN T. MORGAN and Hon. EDMUND W. PETTUS, upon vouchers to be approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. KEAN. I am authorized by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to report back the resolution just referred, and I ask for its present consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Jersey reports from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate the resolution which has just been read and asks for its present consideration. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

NATIONAL-BANK STATISTICS.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, I noticed, of course, the reading of the resolution offered by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY] a moment ago. It is a very important resolution, as I think. I had myself prepared a resolution asking for similar information, but at certain specific dates. Doubtless the resolution offered by the Senator from Georgia is sufficient, but in the haste of hearing it read, I am not able to say so. I, therefore, offer a resolution on the same subject and ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate—

1. The total number of national banks in operation October 1, 1907, and November 18, 1907, in each State and Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and the aggregate capital stock and unimpaired surplus of such banks in each of said States and Territories and the District of Columbia at that time.

2. The total amount of public money on deposit in said banks in each of said States and Territories and the District of Columbia, October 1, 1907, and November 18, 1907.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Texas asks for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. KEAN. Let it go over also.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made by the Senator from New Jersey. The resolution goes over.

ISSUE OF BONDS AND CERTIFICATES.

Mr. CULBERSON. I offer another resolution and ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate what amount of the $50,000,000 Panama bonds and the $100,000,000 3 per cent certificates authorized by order of the President of November 18, 1907, have been issued and to whom they have been awarded.

Mr. KEAN. Let that go over also.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over.

CALLING OF THE ROLL AT BEGINNING OF SESSION.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment of the rules. Of course I shall ask to have it referred to the Committee on Rules, but I desire to say a word about it before it is referred.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let it be read.

Mr. LODGE. Yes; it must be read under the rule.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts proposing to amend the rules will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That at the end of Rule III the following be added: When the Senate assembles on the first day of the session, either regular or extraordinary, it shall be the duty of the Presiding Officer, immediately after calling the Senate to order and after prayer by the Chaplain, to direct that the roll of the Senate be called in order to ascertain the presence of a quorum.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, there was no opportunity to discuss this point on the opening day of the session. I was in error when I said the practice had been uniform during the years I have been in the Senate. The roll has been sometimes called at the opening of the session and sometimes after the swearing in of new members. It is equally erroneous to say that the practice for a hundred years has been the course pursued on Monday.

But the truth is, Mr. President, that this is a case with which precedents have absolutely nothing to do. It is of no consequence what the practice has been except as a mere matter of custom and convenience, for the simple reason that any Senator can compel the calling of the roll at any moment by merely suggesting the absence of a quorum.

When I made the suggestion that it would be well to call the roll at the opening of the Senate, the Chair said, very properly, that the presence of a quorum was to be assumed until it was shown to be absent. The new Senators were then sworn in, and the Chair ordered the calling of the roll, though I am not aware that anything had occurred to demonstrate the absence of a quorum.

Now, Mr. President, it is perfectly clear that any Senator can compel a roll call at any moment. But naturally a Senator hesitates to do it as I did on Monday, because I did not wish to appear discourteous either to the Chair or to the Senators-elect who were about to be sworn in.

The Chair, of course, has no power under the rules to order a roll call. It has been the practice and the habit for the Chair to direct a roll call early in the proceedings of the first day of the session. Of course it would be an absurdity to notify the House that the Senate had a quorum present when there was no official knowledge that there was a quorum present in the Senate.

It is the purpose of this amendment to relieve both the Chair and the Senate, or Senators rather, on this point. I think myself that on the assembling of any legislative body—I mean, of course, at the beginning of a session—the very first thing that must be done is to ascertain that a quorum is present, because otherwise you run the risk of having all the business that is transacted impaired for lack of a quorum.

I do not think the opening of a new Congress is on a parallel with the way we do business from day to day. It is perfectly true that we assume the presence of a quorum constantly when there is not a quorum present in the Senate. But when a new Congress assembles, the Senate being a continuing body, it seems to me the proper method of procedure is to ascertain at once the presence of a quorum.

There have been discussions and disputes about this matter before, and it appears to me much wiser to have it settled by rule and determined once for all—not compel a Senator to to make a point of no quorum and interrupt the proceedings and not leave it to the Chair to exercise a power which is recognized only by custom. It seems to me to be in the interest of the proper transaction of business that the moment the Senate assembles, either in extraordinary or regular session, the roll should be called. That is what is done in the House, where they are all Members-elect. It is there settled by the rules that it is the first duty of the Clerk to call the roll and ascertain who are present; and I believe in the Senate the same rule should apply. That was the method pursued in the sessions of the first two Senates—I have not looked further—and I think it is the proper method to pursue now.

In order to remove all doubt on this point (for it is a point that has been made more than once), I have introduced this amendment. Mr. Sherman raised the point a good many years ago, and I myself have raised it before. I merely desired to say these few words in explanation. I ask that the amendment take the usual course, and that it be referred to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, before the reference of the proposed amendment, I desire the indulgence of the Senate to say a word upon the point at issue.

With regard to the question of practice in the Senate involving the calling of the roll at the opening of a session there is no uniformity, but the question presented by the Senator, as stated by himself, is not new. I find in the RECORD of March 5, 1903, that this question was raised, and I will read from the RECORD.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator allow me one moment before he begins to read?

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

Mr. LODGE. That is the precise thing I alluded to when I said I myself had raised the question before. It had been raised before my time, I am assured.

Mr. CARTER. What I desire is to bring before the Senate the disposition which was then made of the question. The President pro tempore, at that time, as now, the distinguished Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE], said:

The Secretary will call the names of the newly elected Senators whose credentials are on file, four——

Mr. LODGE. Is it not necessary first to call the entire roll to show the presence of a quorum?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It has not heretofore been done. The Chair examined the precedents in reference to that point this morning.

Mr. BACON. As the question has been suggested, I ask that the roll be called.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be the old roll call, all the newly elected members, of course, being left out. The Chair is of opinion that the proceeding he proposes is the correct one—to have the newly elected Senators first sworn in and then a roll call.

Mr. BACON. I have no disposition to press my individual view. I think, however, the suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts is correct. The Senate certainly can not be in session for the purpose of administering oaths to new Senators unless there is a quorum of the Senate present. This is a continuing body. Still I will not press it if it is the sense of the Senate that it should not be done.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, it occurs to me that the President is entirely correct in his construction on this matter. If you order a roll call it must be a roll call of Senators. One-third of this Chamber would be left out of that roll call, because one-third come in each two years.

So, if a roll call is now had there must be a roll call of those who have already been sworn in as Senators. That is, you are going to require a quorum to be shown. A quorum of what? A quorum of men who have been sworn in as Senators, and you have only two-thirds of the membership of the Senate out of which to get that quorum. But if you will allow the Chair to proceed as he has suggested, the oath will be administered to the Senators-elect, and you will find that you have a quorum, I have no doubt.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Georgia, if a quorum did not appear, would we have to disappear from here and go and not swear in the newly elected Senators? That certainly would be the case, or we would have to sit here until we could send and get a quorum of those who have been already sworn in. My experience here has taught me that a quorum is always supposed to be present, unless some Senator makes the point that there is none.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina, in the judgment of the Chair, is entirely right. The presumption is that there is a quorum present, and until a suggestion is made that there is no quorum present it is not necessary to have a roll call.

And so the discussion continued.

Now, Mr. President, the position taken by the President pro tempore at that time, and by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], and others, seems to me to be entirely logical and correct.

Mr. LODGE rose.

Mr. CARTER. Let me suggest, if the Senator will permit me——

Mr. LODGE. Certainly; I only wanted to ask a question when the Senator is ready.

Mr. CARTER. This is a continuing body. A quorum is presumed to be here in pursuance of any adjournment of this body, and, therefore, when we assemble each morning in pursuance of adjournment, a quorum is presumed to be present until the question of a quorum is formally raised. Is there any variation of the presumption when the Senate meets under the mandate of the Constitution rather than in pursuance of its own order of adjournment? Can it be possible that the presumption arises that Senators duly elected and sworn do not, as a matter of fact, appear to discharge their duties? The presumption must be in favor of the regular discharge of duty by all duly elected and qualified Senators.

The suggestion made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] in the previous discussion is quite pertinent as showing the direction to which the construction sought by the Senator from Massachusetts would lead. Should the roll call fail to disclose a quorum of Senators duly qualified as members of the body, and by any calamity or unexpected emergency a quorum of those duly qualified could not be here assembled, would this branch of the legislative department be powerless to perpetuate its own existence? Would we be compelled in some manner, shape, or form to get a quorum when a quorum was impossible, and thus the Senate cease to exist?

How did the Senate come into being in the first place? Not certainly by a roll call, but by the appearance of Senators here day after day to take the oath of office. The Senator from Massachusetts well remembers that it required something over one month to secure the attendance of a sufficient number to take the oath of office to make a quorum of the body. If before any oath could have been administered in the beginning a quorum should have been found not present by a roll call, then the body never could have organized at all, according to the theory of the distinguished Senator.

Now I will yield to the Senator from Massachusetts for a question.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, every House that meets for the first time is composed of members-elect. If you have nothing but members-elect of course you have to call the roll of members-elect, because there is nobody else to call. The first Senate was in exactly that position. But if the Senator will look a little further in those early Journals he will find that they waited several times until a quorum appeared.

Mr. CARTER. Most assuredly.

Mr. LODGE. After the Senate became a continuing body.

Mr. CARTER. The body once organized may admit during its regular and orderly course of business at any time any duly elected Senator from a State to take the oath of office. If, before the oath of office can be administered to a new Senator, the presence of a quorum must be ascertained, then the oath would always be preceded by a roll call to show that when a new member was taken into the body a quorum was present.

Mr. LODGE. Right there, Mr. President, suppose that I or any other Senator, when the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] rose the other day, had made the point of no quorum and the Chair had said that it would be necessary to call the roll, what could have prevented it? Any Senator had the power to compel the calling of the roll at any moment. It is not a question of construction, if the Senator will allow me; it is a question of fact.

Mr. CARTER. The difference arises in the Senator's mind and in my own in what I conceive to be his confusion of a basic principle with a personal or official privilege. It is, of course, the right of any Senator at any time to raise the question of a quorum. The existence of that right, however, does not argue one way or the other against the presumption of a quorum when no one raises the question, nor does it determine that the oath of office can only be administered to a new Senator in the presence of a quorum.

Mr. LODGE. Oh, no; of course not. But if any Senator has the right to compel a roll call, how can you prevent having a roll call when a Senator desires it?

Mr. CARTER. That is unquestionably the personal privilege of the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. Very well. Then I say the precedents are of no consequence. What I want to settle, Mr. President, is this—I do not care whether it is settled one way or the other. The Senator seems to think I am contending that it is much better to have it one way than the other. If it is determined that the proper method of procedure is to call on the first day of a session the names of the members-elect, as it is provided in the House rules, I have not the slightest objection to settling it in that way. If, on the other hand, it appears, as it seems to me, wiser to determine the presence of a quorum before we do any business at all, then let it be settled that the roll shall be called at that point. What I want to get is some determinate procedure.

Now, the Chair has no power to postpone the roll call one minute. When I made the suggestion of a roll call without suggesting the absence of a quorum, the Chair said, with perfect correctness, that a quorum is assumed to be present until the point of no quorum is made. Within ten minutes, when we had added twenty-seven to our number, the Chair, without the point of no quorum being made, ordered a roll call. For what purpose? Obviously that we might officially say to the House that we had a quorum present. The question of a quorum had not been raised. Why did he not continue to assume it instead of ordering a roll call within ten minutes after he had said that a quorum was to be considered as present? For the obvious reason that we needed it for official action.

Mr. CARTER. But, Mr. President, there is a vast difference between ordering a roll call after the membership of the body is completed by the administration of the oath to new Senators and a roll call prior to the administration of such oath. The efficiency of the Senate might become involved in the order of procedure. The Senator, I assume, will agree with me that there is no analogy whatever between the first day of a session in the Senate and in the House of Representatives, this being a continuing body and the House an entirely new body at the beginning of a Congress.

Mr. LODGE. Absolutely; and that is the reason why I think we ought to call the roll of the Senate as it exists.

Mr. CARTER. But, Mr. President, I should like to have the Senator indicate on what principle we should by rule presume that a quorum is not present at the opening day of the session unless we indulge that presumption at the opening day of every session.

Mr. LODGE. The presumption that there was no quorum present was made by the Chair when he ordered the roll to be called.

Mr. CARTER. The Chair ordered the roll to be called.

Mr. LODGE. Immediately after the swearing in of the new members. My only point is whether the roll is to be called before or after the swearing in of new members. The Senate is just as capable of doing business without the swearing in of the new members as it is with them sworn in. It requires a quorum of only 31.

Mr. CARTER. The order of the Vice-President for a roll call after the oath of office had been administered to new Senators in no manner argues for or against the proposition of the Senator from Massachusetts. The proposal of the Senator is to so amend the rules of the Senate as to arbitrarily compel the Vice-President to order a roll call upon the presumption that a quorum is not present or may not be present.

Mr. LODGE. Simply, if the Senator will allow me, because I think it is better than having a single Senator compel a roll call by making the point of no quorum. That is the only point.

Now, let me ask the Senator a question. Suppose I had made the point of no quorum when the Senator from Wisconsin rose to present the credentials of his colleague, the Senator will admit that it would have been necessary to call the roll. Suppose that that roll call had shown only twenty-five Senators, not Senators-elect, but twenty-five Senators, present. Does the Senator contend that we could have then gone on and done business of any kind until we had compelled the attendance of a quorum?

Mr. CARTER. An answer to that question necessarily shows the fallacy of the Senator's position. Every presumption should continue to exist in favor of the presence of a quorum. No Senator will embarrass the Senate, when the matter of its continuous existence is at stake, by raising the question of a quorum. Yet the Senator would by rule compel the Presiding Officer to raise the question.

I wish to ask the Senator another question. If by any misadventure, after the Senator from Massachusetts had raised the question of a quorum, a quorum of the Senators duly qualified could not be procured, would the failure to procure the attendance of a quorum prevent the administration of the oath to new members? If so, then it rests in the power of any one Senator in an instance scarcely conceivable, but still possible, to bring this body as a branch of the legislature of the country to a final termination, because I take it that if a quorum of the Senate is necessary and must be present before the oath of office can be administered or any business of that sort can be done for the perpetuation of the life of the body, it would be entirely helpless, according to the view of the Senator, if a quorum could not be procured.

Mr. LODGE. Not a quorum composed of the whole ninety Senators. That question has been settled, of course. When we had but eighty-eight Senators here, a quorum was forty-five. At the outset of the civil war and for some years afterwards there were twenty-two Senators lacking. I am, of course, speaking in round numbers, for they did not all go out at once; but twenty-two were lacking. We continued, however, to do business and we continued to have a quorum—a quorum of Senators who remained, of course.

This is supposed to be a continuing body. What is the Senator's own presumption as to what is necessary in order to do business? The assumption is necessarily—I will ask the Senator if I am not right—that there are thirty-one Senators here?

Mr. CARTER. I presume——

Mr. LODGE. I mean if the point of no quorum is not made, the assumption of the Chair must be that there are thirty-one or more Senators present.

Mr. CARTER. In the absence of the question of a quorum being raised, I indulge the presumption that the Senator who has taken an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States will be present in this Chamber when required to be here by the Constitution.

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. CARTER. And we have been proceeding on that presumption in the administration of the oath of office to Senators.

Mr. LODGE. The only thing I want is to have it determined one way or the other whether the roll must be called immediately after the Chaplain's prayer and before any business whatever is done, or whether the roll shall be called after the Senators-elect have been sworn in. Whichever way it is settled by the report of the Committee on Rules and by the action of the Senate, I think it desirable to have it determined. The Chair has no power, except what habit and practice have given, to order a roll call at any time, as I understand it. It is the practice of the Chair to direct the roll call on the first day of the session, and I want to give him the power definitely to order the roll call. I care very little about the matter at this time, but I want to have it settled so that this doubt and question need never again be raised.

Mr. CARTER. With the permission of the Senate, I desire to incorporate in the RECORD as a part of my remarks the debate with reference to the question at issue on March 5, 1903.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection permission will be granted.

The matter referred to is as follows:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the names of the newly elected Senators whose credentials are on file, four——

Mr. LODGE. Is it not necessary first to call the entire roll to show the presence of a quorum?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It has not heretofore been done. The Chair examined the precedents in reference to that point this morning.

Mr. BACON. As the question has been suggested, I ask that the roll be called.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be the old roll call, all the newly elected members, of course, being left out. The Chair is of opinion that the proceeding he proposes is the correct one—to have the newly elected Senators first sworn in and then a roll call.

Mr. BACON. I have no disposition to press my individual view. I think, however, the suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts is correct. The Senate certainly can not be in session for the purpose of administering oaths to new Senators unless there is a quorum of the Senate present. This is a continuing body. Still I will not press it if it is the sense of the Senate that it should not be done.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, it occurs to me that the President is entirely correct in his construction on this matter. If you order a roll call it must be a roll call of Senators. One-third of this Chamber would be left out of that roll call, because one-third come in each two years.

So, if a roll call is now had there must be a roll call of those who have already been sworn in as Senators. That is, you are going to require a quorum to be shown. A quorum of what? A quorum of men who have been sworn in as Senators, and you have only two-thirds of the membership of the Senate out of which to get that quorum. But if you will allow the Chair to proceed as he has suggested, the oath will be administered to the Senators-elect, and you will find that you have a quorum, I have no doubt.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Georgia, if a quorum did not appear, would we have to disappear from here and go and not swear in the newly elected Senators? That certainly would be the case, or we would have to sit here until we could send and get a quorum of those who have been already sworn in. My experience here has taught me that a quorum is always supposed to be present unless some Senator makes the point that there is none.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina, in the judgment of the Chair, is entirely right. The presumption is that there is a quorum present, and until a suggestion is made that there is no quorum present it is not necessary to have a roll call.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I stated that I would not press the suggestion. It was based exclusively upon the fact that the Senator from Massachusetts had already stated that there might not be a quorum present. It was upon that that I predicated what I said.

Mr. LODGE. I did not suggest the absence of a quorum. I merely made a parliamentary inquiry, which the Chair has decided.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the names of the newly elected Senators whose credentials are on file, calling four at a time, and as their names are called they will present themselves and take the oath required by law.

The Secretary called the names of—

Mr. ALLISON, Mr. ANKENY, Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas, and Mr. CLAY.

Mr. FOSTER of Washington. My colleague-elect, Mr. ANKENY, is at his hotel, in the charge of physicians, so that he can not be here to-day.

Mr. ALLISON and Mr. CLAY were escorted to the Vice-President's desk by Mr. DOLLIVER and Mr. BACON, respectively, and the oath prescribed by law was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. DILLINGHAM, Mr. FAIRBANKS, Mr. FORAKER, and Mr. FULTON.

The Senators whose names were called were escorted to the Vice-President's desk by Mr. PROCTOR, Mr. BEVERIDGE, Mr. HANNA, and Mr. MITCHELL, respectively, and the oath prescribed by law was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. GALLINGER, Mr. GORMAN, Mr. HANSBROUGH, and Mr. HEYBURN.

Mr. BURNHAM. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. GALLINGER] is necessarily absent.

Mr. GORMAN, Mr. HANSBROUGH, and Mr. HEYBURN were escorted to the Vice-President's desk by Mr. MCCOMAS, Mr. WARREN, and Mr. DUBOIS, respectively, and the oath prescribed by law was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. HOPKINS, Mr. KITTREDGE, Mr. LATIMER, and Mr. LONG.

The Senators whose names were called were escorted to the Vice-President's desk by Mr. CULLOM, Mr. GAMBLE, Mr. TILLMAN, and Mr. BURTON, respectively, and the oath prescribed by law was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. MCCREARY, Mr. MCENERY, Mr. MALLORY, and Mr. NEWLANDS.

The Senators whose names were called were escorted to the Vice-President's desk by Mr. BLACKBURN, Mr. FOSTER of Louisiana, Mr. TALIAFERRO, and Mr. STEWART, respectively, and the oath prescribed by law was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. OVERMAN, Mr. PENROSE, Mr. PERKINS, and Mr. PETTUS.

The Senators whose names were called were escorted to the Vice-

President's desk by Mr. SIMMONS, Mr. KEAN, Mr. BARD, and Mr. MORGAN, respectively, and the oath prescribed by law was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. PLATT of Connecticut, Mr. PLATT of New York, and Mr. SMOOT.

The Senators whose names were called were escorted to the Vice-President's desk by Mr. ALDRICH, Mr. DEPEW, and Mr. KEARNS, respectively, and the oath prescribed by law was administered to them.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. SPOONER, Mr. STONE, and Mr. TELLER.

Mr. SPOONER and Mr. TELLER were escorted to the Vice-President's desk by Mr. QUARLES and Mr. PATTERSON, respectively, and the oath prescribed by law was administered to them.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, this is an interesting debate, but it seems to me it would be more in order after a report on the subject has been made from the Committee on Rules. I rise to offer a resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] will be referred to the Committee on Rules.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. GALLINGER. I offer a resolution, which I ask to have read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The resolution was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee; that the committee may sit during the sessions or recess of the Senate, and that the expense thereof be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted the following resolution, which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That authority is granted to print and bind, for the use of the Committee on the District of Columbia, such papers and documents as may be deemed necessary in connection with subjects heretofore considered, or to be considered, by said committee during the Sixtieth Congress.

PROPOSED DRAINAGE INVESTIGATIONS.

Mr. LATIMER submitted the following resolution, which was read:

Whereas there is in the United States between fifty and one hundred million acres of swamp, tidal, and overflowed lands which are now, for lack of drainage, unproductive and a prolific source of malarial and other diseases, and the Secretary of Agriculture having for the past three years conducted drainage investigations in this country and abroad and has accumulated a large amount of valuable data on the subject: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of Agriculture be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to prepare and submit to the Senate on or before March 1, 1908, a report on drainage, to include the following:

First. The location and area of lands in the United States that are swamp and overflowed and susceptible of being drained and made fit for agriculture.

Second. The effect of drainage on such land and on the public health and upon agriculture.

Third. The area of land which has been drained under the laws of the different States and the benefits which have resulted therefrom.

Fourth. The summary of the legislation of the different States and of the legal and business methods under which drainage works have been constructed and maintained.

Fifth. A review of the drainage laws and policies of the leading agricultural countries of Europe and their results.

Mr. LATIMER. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. President, that resolution carries an appropriation with it, does it not?

Mr. LATIMER. No, sir.

Mr. KEAN. Then I should like to ask the Senator from South Carolina what the estimated cost of this work will be?

Mr. LATIMER. I suppose, under a previous appropriation, that the Secretary of Agriculture already has the information at hand. He has already had engineers making surveys in different States under an appropriation made by Congress, I think of $150,000, last year in the agricultural appropriation act. The engineers have prepared profiles, blueprints, and submitted reports touching the surveys made of the land referred to in the resolution. I should like to have the information the resolution calls for put in print for the use of the Senate.

Mr. KEAN. I think this is a pretty large subject and that we ought to have some estimate as to the cost of it.

Mr. LATIMER. Because it is a large subject I think the Senate ought to have the information called for by the resolution.

Mr. KEAN. Let the resolution go over, Mr. President.

Mr. ALDRICH. The resolution certainly ought to go to a committee; and I suggest that it be referred to the Committee on Public Lands or some appropriate committee, with a view of ascertaining what kind of an investigation it is proposed that we shall embark upon.

Mr. FLINT. Mr. President, I ask to have the resolution go to the Committee on Public Lands. It brings up a question of controversy as between the Interior Department and the Agricultural Department, as to whether or not we are to go into this drainage proposition. On the one hand it is contended that it should go to the Agricultural Department and on the other that it should go to the Interior Department. If this resolution is adopted, it means the starting out of a body of engineers in the Department of Agriculture. I object to the resolution until the matter is fully investigated as to whether it should go to the Interior Department or to the Agricultural Department.

Mr. LATIMER obtained the floor.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. LATIMER. In a moment. In reply to the statement which has just been made by the Senator from California (Mr. FLINT)——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair would state that this discussion is proceeding by unanimous consent.

Mr. LATIMER. I should like merely to reply to the remark of the Senator from California by stating that there is no proposition involved in the resolution to carry the question of the drainage of the swamp lands or any other lands to the Agricultural Department. The proposition is only to obtain information which the Agricultural Department already has touching this question. The agricultural appropriation bill has for several years been carrying appropriations for the purpose of such investigations. The engineers of that Department have made those investigations; the Department already has the information, and the resolution simply asks that the information may be put in print and given to the Senate. There is nothing involved in the resolution which carries any further work to the Agricultural Department or which proposes to discriminate against the Interior Department.

Mr. ALDRICH. On the face of it, the resolution seems to create in the Agricultural Department a department analogous to the Interior Department. We certainly ought not to act upon it, if it means anything in the way of the initiation of expense, without having it referred to some committee. If the Senator from South Carolina is willing to have it referred to the Committee on Public Lands, I have no objection.

Mr. TILLMAN. I suggest to my colleague [Mr. LATIMER] that he let the resolution go over until to-morrow morning, when it can come up in regular order. He can then explain it more fully and probably there will be no objection to it. There seems to be an impression here that on its face it is legislation, when, as a matter of fact, it is nothing more, as I understand it, than calling for information that is already available and involves no expense.

Mr. LATIMER. I want to say further to the Senate that I should have no objection to the resolution going to the Interior Department if that Department could furnish the information, but already the Agricultural Department has the information touching this subject, and that is the information I am after.

Mr. TILLMAN. Instead of referring the resolution to a committee now out of hand, and without discussion, I suggest that it go over until to-morrow, when my colleague can explain it, and then there will probably be no objection to it.

Mr. LATIMER. I have no objection to that course.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be printed and go over.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 2 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, December 5, 1907, at 12 o'clock meridian.

TERRITORY OF ARIZONA,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Territory of Arizona, ss:

I, W. F. Nichols, secretary of the Territory of Arizona, do hereby certify that the annexed is a true and complete transcript of council memorial No. 4, which was filed in this office the 15th day of March, A. D. 1907, at 11.45 o'clock a.m., as provided by law.

W. F. NICHOLS,
Secretary of the Territory of Arizona.

Council memorial No. 4.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

Your memorialists, the twenty-fourth legislative assembly of the Territory of Arizona, respectfully represent:

Whereas the city of Phoenix, in the county of Maricopa and Territory of Arizona, has, from time to time prior to July 1, 1906, issued its warrants for current expenses of said city, amounting to $132,219.53, which warrants are still outstanding, bearing interest, and uncalled, and has also, prior to said date, issued for like indebtedness its warrants to an amount, with interest, of $1,246.52, which warrants have, however, been called, but have not been presented or paid, and are also still outstanding;

And whereas the said city of Phoenix is without power to levy a sufficient tax to pay the same, and some question has arisen as to the right of said city to pay the same from current revenues and thereby postpone the payment of its accruing expenses as they become due;

And whereas it is desirable and advisable that the said outstanding warrants be paid and the credit of said city maintained;

Your memorialists would respectfully request that an act be passed by the Congress of the United States authorizing and empowering the said city of Phoenix to issue its bonds in such form and for such time as the common council of said city may request for the purpose of funding and paying the said warrants with the interest thereon.

The secretary of the Territory is hereby directed to forward one copy of this memorial to the President of the Senate, one copy to the Speaker of the House, and one copy to our Delegate in Congress.

Whereas there was included therein certain property now required for the advancement of the administration of county government within the Territory, it is desired that each county may be able to acquire, maintain, and conduct for its own use and as its own property the public waterworks systems, public highways, parks, squares, fire department buildings, and jails, and property connected therewith within such county: Therefore be it

Resolved by the senate of the Territory of Hawaii, the house of representatives concurring, That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, respectfully requested to pass at an early date an act whereby and whereunder there shall be ceded back to the Territory of Hawaii by the United States the title to all and singular and several public waterworks systems, public highways, parks, squares, fire department buildings, and jails, and all property, appurtenances, and interests used in connection therewith: And be it further

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a concurrent resolution of the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, accepting the sum of $30,000 appropriated by Congress for the legislative expenses of that Territory, which was referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas by an act of Congress of the United States of June 6, 1906 (34 Stat., 417), the sum of $30,000 has been appropriated for legislative expenses of the Territory of Hawaii, upon the proviso that the members of the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii shall not draw their compensation of $200 or any mileage for any extra session held in compliance with section 54 of "An act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii," approved April 30, A. A joint resolution memorializing Congress to so amend sections 11 and 14 of the enabling act of the State of South Dakota, to permit the leasing of school and State lands for a longer period than five years and in greater tracts than one section to any one person or company.

Be it resolved by the house of representatives of the State of South Dakota (the senate concurring), Whereas the act admitting into the Union the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington restricts the leasing of school and State lands for a period of not to exceed five years and in quantities of not more than one section to any one person or company; and Assembly joint and concurrent resolution.

Whereas there is a widespread and rapidly growing belief that the Constitution of the United States should be so amended as to provide for the election of the United States Senators by the direct vote of the people of the respective States; and

Whereas other amendments to the United States Constitution are by many intelligent persons considered desirable and necessary; and

Whereas the Senate of the United States has so far neglected to take any action whatever upon the matter of changing the manner of electing United States Senators, although favorable action upon such proposed change has several times been unanimously taken by the House of Representatives: Therefore be it

Resolved by the house of representatives of the State of Nevada, the senate concurring therein, That the legislature of Nevada in accordance with the provisions of article 5 of the Constitution of the United States hereby apply to and request the Congress of the United States to call a convention for the purpose of proposing amendments to the Constitution of the United States; and

ROBERT LANSDON,

[Senate joint memorial No. 1. By McMillan.]

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent:

That whereas a bill is now pending in the Senate of the United States providing for the granting of additional lands to the State of Idaho for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the State capitol and procuring of the grounds and accommodations necessary and incident thereto. Therefore your memorialists, the legislature of the State of Idaho, earnestly recommend the passage of said bill, and respectfully represent that—

The general grant to said State for said purpose in the admission act is inadequate to provide funds for the erection of a proper capitol building. Much of the land selected under said original grant is arid in character and not of sufficient value to realize on the sale thereof the minimum price therefor as provided by law. Several thousand acres were selected which have since proved of little value, the selections having been erroneously made. There are yet many thousand acres of valuable public land in said State from which such selection could be made.

Your memorialists therefore earnestly recommend the passage of said bill so that land selections for said purpose sufficient to provide for the construction of a proper building may be made.

The secretary of state is hereby requested to forward copies of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and to the Representatives in Congress from this State.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a joint resolution of the legislature of the State of Wisconsin, in favor of the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution authorizing the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people, which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Senate joint resolution No. 28.]

Whereas it is the sense of this legislature of the State of Wisconsin that the public welfare demands that United States Senators should be elected by direct vote of the people; and

Whereas the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States has on four separate occasions passed by a two-thirds vote a resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people; and

Whereas the United States Senate has refused to consider or vote upon said resolution, thereby denying to the people of the several States a chance to secure this imperatively needed change in the method of electing Senators; and

Whereas such opportunity to amend the Constitution of the United States may be obtained by united action of the legislatures of the several States under and pursuant to the provisions of Article V of the Constitution of the United States, calling for a convention to propose such amendment: Now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the senate and assembly of the State of Wisconsin, That, under the authority of Article V of the Constitution of the United States, application is hereby made to Congress to forthwith call a constitutional convention for the purpose of submitting to the States for ratification an amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people; and further

Be it resolved, That the legislatures of all other States of the United States now in session or when next convened be, and they are, respectfully requested to join in this application by the adoption of this or an equivalent resolution; and be it further

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a petition of the legislature of the State of Wisconsin, praying that an appropriation be made to defray the necessary expenses of a survey or other work and report upon the advisability of building a ship canal to connect the Great Lakes with the Mississippi River via Portage City, in Columbia County, Wis., which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Memorial to Congress

Requesting Congress to make an appropriation to defray the necessary expenses of a survey or other work, and to report upon the advisability of building a ship canal to connect the Great Lakes with the Mississippi River via Portage City, in Columbia County, Wis.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States:

Whereas the present failure of the transportation companies to keep pace with the wonderful commercial development of the country, and more especially of the great Northwest, has become a question of national importance; and

Whereas efforts have been made and modes suggested from time to time to connect the Great Lakes with the Mississippi River by the way of Chicago and the Illinois River with a ship canal; and

Whereas we believe a deep waterway between the Great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico by way of the Mississippi River would be a great advantage to the country at large and to the State of Wisconsin and would connect the Northwest and the markets of the world; and

Whereas the most natural, favorable, and cheapest route for such canal is through the Fox and Wisconsin rivers, via Portage City, Wis., and as such improvement is for the benefit of the whole people and not merely for the people of our State: Now therefore be it

Resolved, That our Representatives in Congress are hereby requested to use every endeavor to secure an appropriation to defray the expenses of a competent survey to be made along the Fox and Wisconsin rivers route via Portage City, and that special attention be given that portion of the route between Portage City and the Mississippi River in order to determine whether the improvement of the Wisconsin River or the digging a canal would give the best results; be it further

Resolved, That the governor is requested immediately to transmit a copy of this memorial to the President of the United States, to the presiding officers of the Senate and House of Representatives, and to our Wisconsin Senators and Representatives in Congress.

Assembly joint resolution No. 41, relating to the improvement of the upper Mississippi River.

Whereas the construction of the Panama Canal and the establishment of friendly trade relations with the States of Central and South America will greatly enlarge the importance of the Mississippi River as an avenue of commerce; and

Whereas the necessity exists for the maintenance of the channel of the upper Mississippi River between St. Paul, Minn., and the Missouri River, at a sufficient depth for larger shipping and uninterrupted service:

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That we indorse the recommendation of the War Department to the Congress of the United States for the permanent improvement of the upper Mississippi River and the increase in depth of the channel thereof to 6 feet at low water, and request the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State to vote for and urge, to the best of their ability, the immediate enactment into law of the measures before Congress for such permanent river improvement.

House memorial No. 3.

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
TENTH REGULAR SESSION,

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

Your memoralists, the members of the legislature of the State of Washington, tenth regular session, hereby respectfully call attention to the fact that the State of Washington is being rapidly settled, and that many thousands of acres of the public lands of the United States in this State have been recently permanently or temporarily reserved as forest reserves, and that it is imperative for the welfare of this State that the grant of the right of way for the construction of highways contained in section 2477 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be made applicable to all forest reserves in this State.

The secretary of state is hereby directed to furnish a certified copy of this memorial to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

Passed by the House January 31, 1907.

Mr. PILES presented a petition of the legislature of the State of Washington, praying of the enactment of legislation confirming all soldiers' additional scrip locations made within what was formerly the Columbia Indian Reservation and made prior to the date of withdrawal of such land from entry, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, STATE OF WASHINGTON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, Sam H. Nichols, secretary of state of the State of Washington, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of house memorial No. 5, of the tenth legislative session of the State of Washington, relative to the confirmation of scrip locations in the district formerly comprising the Columbia Indian Reservation, in Okanogan County, with the original enrolled copy of said memorial filed in this office on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1907, and find the same to be a full, true, and correct copy of said original, and of the whole thereof, together with all official notations thereon.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Washington. Done at the capitol, at Olympia, this 8th day of March, A. D. 1907.

[SEAL.]

SAM H. NICHOLS,
Secretary of State.

House memorial No. 5.

To His Excellency, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, and to the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

We, your memorialists, the senate and house of representatives of the State of Washington, in legislative session assembled (tenth regular session), most respectfully represent and pray, as follows:

Whereas it has been the practice of the Interior Department of the United States of America to approve applications for patents and to issue patents under soldiers' additional scrip locations in what was formerly the Columbia Indian Reservation, in Okanogan County, State of Washington; and

Whereas on the 24th day of August, 1905, under act of June 17, 1902 (32 Stat., 338), the honorable Secretary of the Interior reserved certain lands in what was formerly said Columbia Indian Reservation for reclamation purposes; and

Whereas many individuals theretofore filed in the proper United States land office their applications in good faith to make entry under and by virtue of soldiers' additional scrip for certain lands thereafter withdrawn under the reclamation law as aforesaid; and

Whereas, as is usual in such cases, as soon as such soldiers' additional scrip locations have been made, the locators thereof have erected houses and other buildings thereon, fenced the same, prepared the land for tillage, planted orchards and alfalfa thereon, and otherwise permanently improved the same; and

Whereas contracts have been made in relation to said lands, relying upon the practice of the Interior Department in issuing patents to lands under such scrip locations in what was formerly said Columbia Indian Reservation; and

Whereas the Interior Department has recently held that under the act of Congress restoring to the public domain the lands formerly in said Indian reservation (23 Stat. L., pp. 79 and 80), that soldiers' additional scrip could not be used in the acquiring of such lands, thereby overruling its former practice and decisions; and

Whereas in certain cases large amounts of money have been expended by such claimants in constructing irrigation ditches and acquiring water rights to irrigate such lands; and

Whereas such claimants have all, or nearly all, exhausted their homestead rights, and have no lawful way of acquiring said land except under said applications; and

Whereas all of such claimants will be subjected to heavy losses unless an act of Congress is passed for their relief; and

Whereas it is manifestly unfair and unjust to subject such land claimants to such loss, where valid soldiers' additional scrip was filed in the proper United States land office prior to said order of withdrawal; and

Whereas in Okanogan County, where said lands are situate, and where the people are most familiar with the circumstances and conditions prevailing there in each and both of the Republican and Democratic county conventions in the year 1906, the following plank in their respective platforms was unanimously adopted, to wit:

"It is the sense of this convention that Congress should pass an act confirming all soldiers' additional scrip locations made within what was formerly the Columbia Indian Reservation, and made prior to the date of withdrawal of such land from entry on August 24, 1905, on account of the Okanogan irrigation project;" and

Whereas a considerable number of said scrip locations have been made outside of said Okanogan irrigation project and within what was formerly said Columbia Indian Reservation in good faith,

Therefore we, your memorialists, most earnestly and respectfully pray that an act of Congress be passed immediately confirming such scrip locations and authorizing and directing the honorable Secretary of the Interior to cause patents to be issued to said scrip locators.

The secretary of state is hereby directed to immediately send certified copies of this memorial to the President of the United States, President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each of the Senators and Congressmen from the State of Washington.

Mr. PILES presented a memorial of the legislature of the State of Washington, remonstrating against making the temporary withdrawal of land for forest reserves permanent, and praying that they be set aside and that the lands therein described be at once restored to the public domain, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, STATE OF WASHINGTON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, Sam H. Nichols, secretary of state of the State of Washington, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of house memorial No. 6, of the legislative session of 1907, relative to agricultural lands within forest reserves, with the original enrolled copy of said memorial now on file in this office, and find the same to be a full, true, and correct copy thereof and of the whole of said original, together with all official indorsements thereon.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Washington. Done at the capitol at Olympia this 25th day of March, A. D. 1907.

[SEAL.]

SAM H. NICHOLS,
Secretary of State.

House memorial No. 6.

To His Excellency, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States of America; to the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and to the honorable Secretary of Agriculture:

We, your memorialists, the senate and house of representatives of the State of Washington, in legislative session assembled (tenth regular session), most respectfully represent and pray as follows:

Whereas the Congress of the United States passed an act entitled "An act to provide for the entry of agricultural land within forest reserves," approved June 11, 1906 (34 Stat., 233); and

Whereas said act, while beneficial to a limited extent, the same is wholly inadequate to accomplish the purposes for which it was enacted. Under said act a prospective homesteader (who is generally a man of limited means) coming from the East to the West to make settlement upon lands within the forest reserve, is not permitted to select for himself nonmineral land, such as to him is satisfactory for a permanent home, but is subjected to long delays, lasting months or years, before he can make his settlement, during which time there is an element of uncertainty as to whether or not he will ever be able to select a homestead desired by him, and as to whether or not a given piece of land is suitable for a homestead must be determined by some subordinate of the Agricultural Department, who, perhaps, is wholly ignorant of local needs and necessities; and

Whereas boards of trade, commerical bodies, "booster" clubs, and railway companies have distributed millions of pages of literature to induce settlers to acquire homes of their own on the public lands of the United States under the homestead laws; and

Whereas in response to said advertising tens of thousands of families have deserted their homes in the East and now find themselves in a new country among strangers, with limited means, and are confronted with the fact that hundreds of thousands of acres of public land suitable to be taken for homsteads have recently been withdrawn from settlement as forest reserves; and

Whereas now the serious question arises: "What shall such citizens and their families do?" and

Whereas it is a gross injustice to make wholesale withdrawals of public lands from homestead settlement under the guise of "temporary withdrawal" with no regard as to whether or not such lands embrace timber or prairie lands or lands necessary for forest reserve purposes; and

Whereas large portions of such lands so withdrawn are essentially agricultural lands; and

Whereas the making of forest reserves out of lands less than 4,500 feet in altitude above sea level retards and prevents the settlement and prosperity of the West by reason of the fact, among other things, that home builders in the forest reserves will be isolated, without hope of near school or church privileges without reasonable expectation of the making of suitable roads or the keeping of them in proper repair without extortionate individual expense and running the gauntlet of "red tape;" and

Whereas for like reasons, to a large extent, there is a confiscation of the property of those who have heretofore asquired rights or titles to lands now within the forest reserve, it being a matter of common knowledge that the denser the population in a given community the higher is the price of land, and, conversely, the more isolated the less valuable, and anything retarding or preventing settlement correspondingly decreases the value of the land; and

Whereas there are large numbers of settlers who for years have resided upon unsurveyed lands who now find themselves within the boundaries of forest reserves, who, if from sickness or other unavoidable casualty are compelled to leave their homestead claims, will virtually lose the result of years of toil and their improvements, for the reason that when they quit their premises before making final proof, their lands will revert to the forest reserve; and in most instances no purchaser of the improvements can be found who is willing to become entangled in the meshes of forest-reserve regulations; and

Whereas under the laws of this State the possessor of land must surround it with a lawful fence in order to recover damages to crops by cattle, therefore the farmer or stockman living within or adjacent to a forest reserve, in order to protect his crops and pasturage from forest-reserve cattle, must be to the expense of erecting and maintaining a lawful fence; while the forest reserve is not fenced, and is not proposed to be fenced; and the owner of outside cattle must, at his peril, fence or herd his cattle from out the forest reserve or pay such price from year to year as shall suit the varying caprice of forest officers; and

Whereas the making of forest reserves necessitates new and untried procedure, with consequent uncertainties and delays, in order for the settler on unsurveyed land therein to secure the survey of his land, before which he can not acquire title; and

Whereas, in 1866, Congress passed an act, a portion of which now exists as section 2477 of the United States Revised Statutes, which grants a free right of way across the public lands for the construction of highways, and which enables citizens and local State authorities to speedily construct roads as the necessities of new and quickly growing communities require. (See Okanogan County v. Cheetham, 37 Wash., 682); and

Whereas said section does not apply to forest reserves; and

Whereas communities existing on opposite sides of a forest reserve are subject to intolerable delays in attempting to satisfy the requirements of far-distant officers of the Government, across such forest reserves, thereby retarding the development and prosperity of the country thus victimized; and

Whereas it often happens that part of a homesteader's claim, by such indiscriminate withdrawals for forest reserves, is placed partly within and partly without the forest reserve, thereby harassing him with two sets of land laws, a variety of "regulations," and the usual Government delays; and

Whereas if such lands were in private ownership, they would be subjected to State and local taxation, and thereby contribute to the support of government in new States and new communities where revenues are generally inadequate to meet present needs; and the present makeshift provided by Congress as an offset for the loss of such just revenues from taxation being wholly inadequate and uncertain for the object intended thereby; and

Whereas it has been the wise policy of the Government for more than half a century to grant free water rights upon the public lands; and

Whereas very recently it has been determined to hamper the acquisition of water rights and rights of way within forest reserves, to the great detriment of the general public; and

Whereas as great protection against the ravages of forest fires can be given outside of forest reserves as within them; and

Whereas the Congress of the United States, in pursuance of a wise and liberal policy, in 1875 (18 Stat., 482) passed an act granting to railroad companies generally a right of way across the public domain, with the right to take from adjacent land material, earth, stone, and timber necessary for the construction of such railroad, etc., which act has aided materially in the upbuilding of the West; and

Whereas the act of Congress of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat., 1233), granting a right of way for railroads across forest reserves does not grant the right for such railway companies to take material, earth, stone, or timber necessary for the construction of such railroad; and

Whereas the making of a forest reserve segregates the land therein contained from the category of public lands, and therefore said act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat., 482), does not apply thereto; and

Whereas the needs of the people require the speedy building of electric railways; and

Whereas the great source of water power for the operation of such railways and the providing of electric lights and power for cities and towns, and for the operation of mines, is situated within the limits of forest reserves; and

Whereas the present Federal restrictions tend materially to defeat the accomplishment of these benign purposes, on account of such forest reserves; and

Whereas the stock industry is impeded and discouraged by the creation of forest reserves, among other things by the imposition of a pasturage tax and the uncertainty from year to year as to the amount of such tax and the arbitrary and petty exactions inflicted by forest officer, high and low; and

Whereas it is the avowed purpose of the Forestry Service to make the same self-supporting without an appropriation from Congress therefor, and to recruit and organize an army of forestry officers, who must be supported and maintained from the income of the reserve, which means that the communities adjacent to such forest reserves must pay the bill; and

Whereas more than $700,000 were wrested from such communities for such purposes during the last year, as against $60,000 the year before; and

Whereas it is now proposed to increase such exactions in like ratio from year to year; and

Whereas many hundreds of thousands of acres of land have been placed in forest reserves in two counties in this State, namely, Okanogan County and Ferry County, against the unanimous protest of the citizens of these counties, as far as the recent temporary withdrawals are concerned; and

Whereas the people of a local community can best be trusted to decide what is for their best interests and those of their children and their children's children:

Therefore we most earnestly and respectfully protest against the making of said temporary withdrawal permanent, and ask that they be immediately set aside and that the lands therein described be at once restored to the public domain.

The secretary of state is hereby directed to immediately transmit a certified copy of this memorial to His Excellency the President of the United States of America, to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, to the honorable Secretary of Agriculture, and to each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, December 4, 1907.

Hon. J. H. GALLINGER,
Chairman Committee on the District of Columbia,
United States Senate.

DEAR SIR: The Commissioners have the honor to inclose herewith a bill to enable the traction companies to proceed with permanent construction of necessary extensions to give the public access to the new Union Station, and to request that in view of the present poor facilities your committee may give early attention to the matter. This bill has been carefully prepared by the Commissioners with a view of leaving out all extensions except those that are absolutely necessary to give the public access at as early a date as possible to this station, and it is the belief of the Commissioners that as in past sessions of Congress the addition to this bill of sections meritorious in themselves, but not matters of absolute necessity, will imperil the passage of the measure and perpetuate the present deplorable conditions.

The first section of the bill provides that the City and Suburban Railway Company extend its lines from New Jersey avenue and G street by way of Massachusetts avenue to Stanton square, and also connects this extension with its present line on North Capitol street by a new installation of the one block from G street to Massachusetts avenue.

The second section provides for the extension of the lines of the Washington Railway and Electric Company from Delaware avenue and C street NE. by way of Delaware avenue to the Union Station Plaza, connecting with the loop authorized in the first section. This section also includes some transfer legislation which has not previously been reported upon by the Commisioners, but which they favor, and which passed both Houses of Congress at the last session. These two extensions are necessary to allow the patrons of the Metropolitan lines from the northwest section of the city, from the section served by the North Capitol street line, and from the section toward Stanton square and Lincoln Park to obtain access to the station.

Section 3 authorizes the extension of the lines of the Washington Railway and Electric Company on First street east from the corner at the Congressional Library to the Anacostia line at First and E streets, and this extension the Commissioners believe is necessary to allow the residents of the District in Anacostia and along this line to get to the station without a very excessive detour.

Section 4 authorizes the extension of the lines of the Capital Traction Company along Delaware avenue, from C street to the plaza, and also from Florida avenue and Seventh street by way of New Jersey avenue to Massachusetts avenue, and thence occupying jointly with the Metropolitan line tracks to the Union Station Plaza along Massachusetts avenue. Thence from the plaza by way of E street, California street, or F street, to the corner of Second and F streets NE. (the particular route to be fixed by the Commissioners of the District), thence along F street to Eighth street east and by way of Eighth street to Pennsylvania avenue SE.

This extension is necessary, first, to give the patrons of the Capital Traction Company, on Fourteenth street extended, on U street, and the Chevy Chase line the most direct access to the station. The route by way of New Jersey avenue was selected after a careful consideration over all other proposed routes as the most direct line of approach and one that can be made with the minimum of inconveninece to the public. New Jersey avenue is not an important carriageway in the sense that Massachusetts avenue is, and throughout nearly its entire extent is now sufficiently wide between the curbs to accommodate two street car tracks with ample carriageways on either side and with the minimum disturbance of existing surface conditions (curbs, sidewalks, and trees). The extension of the Capital Traction lines to the eastern section of the city by way of F and Eighth streets is believed to be necessary to afford access to the station to the people of the northeast section and those in the southeast near the Navy-Yard. The location of the entrance of this line to the plaza is left to the control of the Commissioners, as the street location is not yet absolutely determined and it may be found desirable to enter the plaza through any one of the three streets previously mentioned. The Commissioners have not included in this bill the further extension of the Capital Traction lines along Florida avenue and Eighth streets, although they earnestly favor this extension, as they believe that this extension can well be incorporated in another bill, and its addition to this bill is not germane to the urgent necessity of public access to the station.

Section 5 provides for the removal of tracks which will be abandoned after the completion of the installation. Section 6 gives the usual authority to lay ducts. Section 7 specifies the time for completion of the work, and is believed to be none too long. Section 8 contains the usual authority for joint construction and occupation, with the additional proviso requiring four tracks in front of the main entrance to the station. Section 9 extends present rights to the companies to their new lines.

Section 10 gives the Commissioners authority to locate the tracks across reservation 77 to the best purpose, thereby eliminating the bad trackage arrangement now existing around this circle. The Chief of Engineers of the United States Army, who has control of this reservation, is favorable to this occupation. This section also provides for the purchase by the traction companies of such property in square 626 as it may be necessary to acquire to carry the tracks straight through G street and into Massachusetts avenue without the curves which would otherwise be required.

Section 11 imposes upon the traction companies the financial burden of paving the streets to the curb, where it is necessary in this installation to widen the roadway of any street. Section 12 imposes on the traction companies the obligation to adjust the grade of their tracks to the new grade that may at any time be fixed by the Commissioners of the District.

Section 13 provides for the approval of the Commissioners of the District to all work and plans.

Section 14 provides for a temporary overhead trolley installation to be installed at once jointly by the two traction companies and to be maintained and operated by them until after the permanent installation shall have been completed. The location of this is specified to run from the intersection of North Capitol and C streets to the Union Station, on plans to be approved by the Commissioners of the District.

Sections 15 and 16 are the usual terminal sections for street railway acts.

The Commissioners have the honor further to request that, should it appear that an organized opposition is tending to delay the passage of this act, or one looking to the same end, it is their belief that section 14 of this act should be taken bodily from the act and passed, either in the shape of a separate act or a joint resolution, so that the public may at the very earliest date have relief from the present intolerable conditions.

Very respectfully,

HENRY B. F. MACFARLAND,
President Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have further bills to introduce, but for the moment I yield to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH], who desires to offer something in connection with the bill just submitted.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. In connection with the bill just introduced, I desire to offer certain amendments intended to be proposed to that bill. I ask that they may likewise be printed in the RECORD, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

There being no objection, the proposed amendments were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 10. That all street railway companies within the District of Columbia, both now and hereafter to be chartered by Congress, shall receive and exchange tickets with each other, and shall also give to passengers free transfers which shall be received by all street railway companies at one intersection and connection with all other street railway lines; and also give to and receive from each passenger paying one cash fare of 5 cents a free transfer good for more than one exchange at one intersection, and good continuously at all intersections with all street railways and from intersection to intersection, within the said District of Columbia; but transfers on tickets or cash fares shall not be good for a round trip: Provided, That existing transfer arrangements between the Washington Railway and Electric Company and other passenger transportation corporations shall not be terminated except by authority of Congress.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 4, 1907.

ELECTION OF PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, according to custom and precedent, I submit the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate now proceed to the election of a President of the Senate pro tempore.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That WILLIAM P. FRYE, a Senator from the State of Maine, be, and he hereby is, elected President of the Senate pro tempore, to hold office during the pleasure of the Senate and in accordance with the resolution of the Senate adopted on the 12th day of March, 1890, on the subject.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. CULBERSON. I move to amend the resolution by substituting the name of the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] for that of the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE].

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment submitted by the Senator from Texas.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President, this is very sudden, and I was entirely unapprised of having so great an honor so near to me. It is pleasing to know that I am so flatteringly considered by the distinguished Senator from Texas and other colleagues. If it be discovered presently that I am elected, I should feel that I displaced a much abler and better presiding officer than I could hope to be. I beg leave to say to the Senators who may wish to vote for me that, while if I am chosen I may consider favorably the idea of serving, I shall not have my feelings hurt and neither be discouraged nor at all distressed if the honor shall fall upon the experienced and excellent temporary presiding officer who has heretofore filled the position.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON].

The amendment was not agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question now is on agreeing to the resolution submitted by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON].

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, though probably it is too late to ask it, I should like to have a roll call on the amendment submitted by my colleague [Mr. CULBERSON].

Mr. DANIEL. I hope the Senator will not ask that that be done.

Mr. BAILEY. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution stands agreed to.

PUBLIC PRINTING AND BINDING.

Mr. WHYTE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 1) amending an act relative to the public printing and binding, approved March 1, 1907, which was reported yesterday by the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], the chairman of the Committee on Printing.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the joint resolution may be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the joint resolution.

The Secretary proceeded to read the joint resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. I withdraw the request for the further reading of the joint resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Iowa withdraws his request for the further reading of the joint resolution. Is there objection to its present consideration?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment and ordered to be engrossed for a third reading.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I think it is unusual to pass a joint resolution of this importance without having it read in full and attention called to it. As I understand, only the title of the joint resolution has been read. I insist that the joint resolution shall be read at length before action is taken upon it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be read at length.

The Secretary read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That publications ordered printed by Congress, or either House thereof, shall be in four series, namely: One series of reports made by the committees of the Senate, to be known as "Senate reports;" one series of reports made by the committees of the House of Representatives, to be known as "House reports;" one series of documents, other than reports of committees, the orders for printing which originate in the Senate, to be known as "Senate documents," and one series of documents, other than committee reports, the orders for printing which originate in the House of Representatives, to be known as "House documents." The publications in each series shall be consecutively numbered, the numbers in each series continuing in unbroken sequence throughout the entire term of a Congress, but the foregoing provisions shall not apply to the documents printed for the use of the Senate in executive session: Provided, That of the "usual number" the copies which are intended for distribution to State and Territorial libraries and other designated depositories of all annual or serial publications originating in or prepared by an Executive Department, bureau, office, commission, or board shall not be numbered in the document or report series of either House of Congress, but shall be designated by title and bound as hereinafter provided, and the departmental edition, if any, shall be printed concurrently with the "usual number."

SEC. 2. That in the binding of Congressional documents and reports for distribution by the Superintendent of Documents to State and Territorial libraries and other designated depositories, every publication of sufficient size on any one subject shall hereafter be bound separately and receive the title suggested by the subject of the volume, and the others shall be distributed in unbound form as soon as printed. The Public Printer shall supply the Superintendent of Documents sufficient copies of those publications distributed in unbound form, to be bound and distributed to the State and Territorial libraries and other designated depositories for their permanent files. The library edition, as well as all other bound sets of Congressional numbered documents and reports, shall be arranged in volumes and bound in the manner directed by the Joint Committee on Printing.

SEC. 3. That section 2 of an act to amend an act providing for the public printing and binding, and so forth, approved March 1, 1907, is hereby repealed.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, I suppose this joint resolution has been reported by some committee of the body.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It was reported yesterday from the Committee on Printing.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I had the joint resolution before me, and I did not ask to have it read because I wanted to know what it contains, but because I wanted to maintain the rule which has ever been enforced since I have been in the Senate, that no measure shall pass this body without first being read.

Mr. GALLINGER. The joint resolution was read on yesterday.

Mr. TELLER. It might have been read yesterday, in the early part of the session when I was not present. If I had known the joint resolution had been read yesterday, I might not have made the objection I did. I have no objection to the joint resolution, and I hope it will accomplish the purpose which the committee think it will.

The joint resolution was read the third time and passed.

ISSUE OF BONDS AND CERTIFICATES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution submitted by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON], coming over from yesterday, which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate what amount of the $50,000,000 Panama bonds and the $100,000,000 3 per cent certificates authorized by order of the President of November 18, 1907, have been issued and to whom they have been awarded.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, I am informed that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], the chairman of the Committee on Finance, is absent, and it is therefore desirable that the resolution should go over until Monday without losing its place. I understand there is no objection to that course.

Mr. KEAN. I suggest that the other resolutions, including that of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY], also go over.

Mr. CLAY. I am perfectly willing that my resolution shall go over with the understanding that it will come up as part of the morning business on Monday.

Mr. KEAN. Let the resolutions go over without prejudice.

Mr. CLAY. Without prejudice. I am entirely willing that that course shall be pursued.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the resolutions submitted by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON] will lie over without prejudice, and also the resolution submitted by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY]. A resolution on a different subject was submitted yesterday by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. LATIMER].

Mr. LATIMER. I ask that that resolution may also go over until Monday, retaining its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that when the Senate adjourns today, it be to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After six minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 1 o'clock and 21 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, December 9, 1907, at 12 o'clock meridian.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented resolutions adopted by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in convention assembled at Washington, D. C., December 4, 5, and 6, 1907, which were referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

National Rivers and Harbors Congress, in convention assembled, Washington, D. C., December 4, 5, 6, 1907. Report of committee on resolutions unanimously adopted.

After a year's consideration of the aims and purposes of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress as expressed in the resolutions adopted by that body in 1906 the American people have given them emphatic indorsement by sending to this convention assembled at the national capital, December 4, 5, and 6, 1907, nearly 2,000 delegates from 37 States and Territories, representing the commercial, manufacturing, producing, and consuming interests of the country, and these delegates are unanimously of the belief—

First. That profitable and successful commerce is absolutely dependent upon economical transportation of commodities, and that the importance of transportation will increase with the growth of population and the development of the nation's resources.

Second. That the railroads of the United States are now unable to handle the business offered them and much loss results from the congested condition of traffic; that according to high railroad authority the business of the country has increased over 100 per cent within ten years, while the facilities for handling it by rail have been increased only about 20 per cent, and as the railroads can not be expected in the near future to increase their facilities sufficiently to relieve the situation other means of transportation should be provided at once.

That transportation of heavy commodities by water on all rivers and inland waterways is much cheaper and usually quicker than by rail; that no country in the world has been so blessed by nature with water courses as our own, and that if properly improved and connected by canals they would furnish a convenient means of shipping enormous volumes of freight, thereby relieving the congestion of the railroads and furnishing cheap and safe transportation for the benefit of producer and consumer.

That the time has come when the policy of the Federal Government toward waterways over which it rightly has supreme control should be more liberal, persistent, and continuous than heretofore; that as a result of intermittent action meritorious works of importance begun many years ago are still far from completion; that appropriations for rivers, waterways, and harbors have been made at intervals of three years instead of annually; that for the past ten years they have averaged only about $32,000,000 a year, or less than 3 per cent of the average annual expenditures of the Government, and that enough money should be appropriated each year for at least ten years properly to improve various rivers, waterways, and harbors on plans which have been and shall be surveyed and approved by the Government engineers and authorized by the Congress of the United States: Therefore be it

Resolved, by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, at the present session, containing delegates of every shade of opinion and representing every business interest in the land, standing for a policy not for a project—

First. That we earnestly urge the adoption by the Federal Government of a wise, liberal, comprehensive water policy that will provide for the proper improvement within the next ten years of the rivers, waterways, and harbors of our country, the improvement of which is justified by present and prospective benefits to commerce.

Second. That without presuming to prescribe the engineering or the financial details of this great undertaking this congress strongly urges upon the Congress of the United States the importance of the immediate adoption of a comprehensive plan of waterway improvement, of the carrying on of the work by an adequate number of engineers, and of such liberal appropriations annually as will insure the early completion of such projects as may be undertaken.

Third. That we cordially indorse the action of President Roosevelt in appointing a special Inland Waterways Commission, being confident that its report will prove a source of accurate and valuable information to the American people. We further recommend that Congress enact such laws as will make the Inland Waterways Commission permanent and will provide it with necessary authority for its investigations and recommendations.

Fourth. That this congress cordially thanks President Roosevelt for the support he has given to its purposes by his speeches and by his treatment of the subject in his recent message to Congress.

Fifth. That we ask Congress to view the river waterway and harbor appropriations not as the appropriations of money for the current expenses of Government, but as an investment in permanent improvements, bound to pay increasing dividends from year to year. Viewing these appropriations in this light, Congress is fully warranted in authorizing an annual expenditure, beginning at the present session, of not less than one-tenth of the amount of money required for all the various river, waterway, and harbor improvements already planned and approved by the engineers in charge or hereafter planned and approved, in order that the work may be carried to speedy completion, such appropriations to be not less than $50,000,000 annually, and Congress is further warranted in authorizing the expenditure of the money needed and in providing for the same, if the excess of funds available, by a bond issue similar in character to that for the building of the Panama Canal, whereby part of the cost of these vast improvements will be spread over a succession of years and borne by all who share the benefits.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a joint resolution of the legislature of the State of Iowa, which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE STATE OF IOWA,
SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, W. C. Hayward, secretary of state of the State of Iowa, do hereby certify that the attached instrument of writing is a true and correct copy of senate joint resolution No. 2, adopted by the thirty-second general assembly of the State of Iowa, making application to the Congress of the United States to call a convention for proposing amendments to the Constitution of the United States, as the same appears of record in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the secretary of state of the State of Iowa. Done at Des Moines, the capital of the State, March 15, A. D. 1907.

[SEAL.] W. C. HAYWARD,
Secretary of State.

Joint resolution of the thirty-second general assembly of the State of Iowa, making application to the Congress of the United States to call a convention for proposing amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

Whereas we believe that Senators of the United States should be elected directly by the voters; and

Whereas to authorize such direct election an amendment to the Constitution of the United States is necessary; and

Whereas the failure of Congress to submit such amendment to the States has made it clear that the only practicable method of securing a submission of such amendment to the States is through a constitutional convention to be called by Congress upon the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of all the States: Therefore be it

Resolved by the general assembly of the State of Iowa:

SECTION 1. That the legislature of the State of Iowa hereby makes application to the Congress of the United States, under Article V of the Constitution of the United States, to call a constitutional convention for proposing amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

SECTION 2. That this resolution, duly authenticated, shall be delivered forthwith to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, with the request that the same shall be laid before the said Senate and House.

N. E. KENDALL,
Speaker of the House.
WARREN GARST,
President of the Senate.

Approved March 12, A. D. 1907.
ALBERT B. CUMMINS, Governor.

I hereby certify that this joint resolution originated in the Senate and is known as senate joint resolution No. 2.

GEO. A. NEWMAN,
Secretary of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented resolutions adopted by the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway Association in convention at Memphis, October 4 and 5, 1907, which were referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas for more than half a century the desirability of a deep waterway extending from the Great Lakes of the North to the Gulf of Mexico has been generally recognized and favored by many of the leading statesmen and publicists of America as an economic and commercial, if not a strategic and military necessity; this sentiment being first voiced in part, it will be remembered, by the historic convention composed of delegates from all the Northwestern and Southern States and held in the city of Memphis in November, 1845, with John C. Calhoun as chairman, in the following direct and forceful resolution, to wit:

"Resolved, That the project of connecting the Mississippi River with the lakes of the North and thence with the Atlantic Ocean by a ship canal is a measure worthy of the enlightened consideration of Congress;" and

Whereas the demand for the speedy completion of this munificent public work has become more and more apparent and pronounced as the country has developed, it being now manifest to the most casual and careless observer that, notwithstanding the enormous increase in railroad mileage during the past fifty years, the transportation facilities furnished thereby are totally inadequate to the task of handling properly, economically, and satisfactorily the vast tonnage supplied by the increased output of the mines, farms, and factories of the Mississippi Valley; and

Whereas it is also manifest that the valuable system of waterways provided by nature as a natural rival of the railroads of the country and the ever-present and potent regulators of their transportation charges have been too long neglected, or at least that their development and betterment have not kept pace with the reasonable demands and requirements of the public; and

Whereas it is known of all men that the completion of the Panama Canal will, in the language of the great American navigator and naval commander, Commodore Maury, "carry the Delta of the Mississippi across the continent, and place one mouth of that river in the Pacific Ocean," thus making "the greatest of rivers tributary to the greatest of oceans;" and it is also known that to reap all the benefits and rich rewards that will follow the completion of the isthmian canal, we must provide direct, safe, and cheap transportation for the natural and manufactured products of the Mississippi Valley by means of a deep waterway of a minimum depth of 14 feet, extending from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi, and then southward via that river to the Gulf of Mexico; and

Whereas the National Government is charged by our Constitution and laws with and in pursuance thereof has properly assumed control and jurisdiction of the rivers, harbors, and waterways of the country, and is therefore committed to the duty of their improvement and betterment by some comprehensive and intelligent plan which will best conserve the interests of the people:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the deepening of the waterways from the Lakes and Gulf is a public necessity, and that it is a national and imperative duty to take definite and immediate action to deepen said waterways to a depth of 14 feet from the Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, through the route already selected by the Army engineers, with all practical speed.

Resolved, That it is the intention that this grand channel shall be a part of a great, comprehensive system of inland waterways which shall include the great tributaries of the Mississippi River, and the other meritorious waterways of the Mississippi Valley: Be it further

Resolved, That the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway Association hereby extends thanks to our colaborers in the great work of inland waterways improvements: the Missouri Valley Improvement Association, the Upper Mississippi Improvement Association, the Interstate Mississippi River Improvement and Levee Association, the Ohio Valley Improvement Association, the Interstate Inland Waterways Association of Louisiana and Texas, and all other kindred associations in this great valley, for their valuable assistance in the past, and assure them of our sympathetic interest in the object of their efforts in the important work in which they are respectively engaged, and of our most cordial and energetic cooperation therein: Be it further

Resolved, That we hereby tender the unanimous and profound thanks of this convention to the President for his masterly and forceful address, and for the great honor he has conferred upon us by his presence here as our most distinguished guest: Be it further

Forty-fifth general assembly, regular session.

[Senate Joint Resolution No. 27. Introduced by Hon. Jesse E. Bartley.]

Whereas the city of Shawneetown was laid out by the General Government in the year 1809 and is the oldest town in Illinois since the lamentable destruction of Kaskaskia; and

Whereas the city of Shawneetown many years ago constructed a levee about it to protect its citizens and their homes and property from the periodical floods of the Ohio and Wabash rivers, which levee also serves as the only harbor of safety in times of high water and storms between Mount Vernon, Ind., and the mouth of the Saline River, a distance of some 50 miles, for steamboats and other water crafts navigating said rivers and transporting freight and passengers and carrying the United States mail to and from points along said rivers; and

Whereas said levee is in great need of being enlarged, strengthened, and repaired to serve its purpose and preserve the work already done, and the Internal Improvement Commission of Illinois has estimated that it will require the expenditure of at least $53,115 to accomplish the work in the most economical way; and

Whereas this general assembly has appropriated $17,000 for making the repairs most urgently needed, and said work is now being done under the supervision of said Internal Improvement Commission; and

Whereas the completion of the work contemplated in the estimate of said commission is of general as well as local importance for the reasons above set forth: Therefore be it

Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring therein), That Congress be, and is hereby, memorialized to appropriate such sum of money as may be necessary to enlarge, strengthen, and repair the said levee at Shawneetown so as to make said levee permanently safe for the purposes for which it was constructed and as a harbor for steamboats and other craft.

Resolved, That the United States Senators and Members of the House of Representatives from the State of Illinois in Congress are hereby respectfully requested to use their united efforts to secure such appropriation.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to the President of the Senate, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to the chairman and members of the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the National House of Representatives, and to our two United States Senators, Hon. PROPOSED INVESTIGATION BY COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Mr. TILLMAN. I send to the desk a resolution, for which I ask immediate consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be instructed to investigate and report to the Senate—

First. Whether the issue of the certificates of indebtedness, bearing 3 per cent interest, bids for which were invited by the Secretary of the Treasury on November 18, 1907, were for the purpose of borrowing money to "meet public expenditures," as provided by section 32 of the act approved June 13, 1898, and if not, whether there is any warrant of law for the issue of said certificates.

Second. Whether the issue of fifty million of bonds of the Panama Canal loan, bids for which were called for by the Secretary of the Treasury on November 18, 1907, was required to "defray the expenditures" on said canal, there being at the time when both of these loans were made upwards of $200,000,000 in the Treasury for current expenditures.

Third. Whether there is any legislation necessary to protect the people and business interests of the country from the issue of unlawful money, if clearing-house certificates are such, and to prevent the illegal increase of the public debt in time of peace.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution just read.

Mr. LODGE. In the absence of the chairman of the Committee on Finance, I think the resolution had better go over. I ask that it may go over.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am perfectly willing to have it go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over.

ISSUE OF CLEARING-HOUSE CERTIFICATES.

Mr. TILLMAN. I send another resolution to the desk, for which I ask immediate consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be instructed to investigate and report to the Senate as soon as practicable—

First. Whether clearing-house certificates, with which the country is now flooded, have been issued under authority of law or contrary to the same.

Second. Whether the issuing of such certificates by an association of banks, both State and national, and the use of the same as money subjects such certificates or notes to the tax of 10 per cent provided in section 3412, United States Revised Statutes.

Third. Whether it would be permissible under the law as it is for an association of banks, warehouses, and elevators to issue certificates based on cotton, wheat, and tobacco stored in such warehouses and elevators and fully insured, to be used as money in marketing said crops in the same way as clearing-house certificates are now used.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. Let this resolution go over also.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am perfectly willing that it shall go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under the objection of the Senator from Iowa.

SARAH E. SEWARD.

Mr. BULKELEY submitted the following resolution, which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Sarah E. Seward, widow of William Todd Seward, late a messenger in the employ of the Senate of the United States, a sum equal to six months' salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

ISSUE OF BONDS AND CERTIFICATES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. CULBERSON on the 4th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate what amount of the $50,000,000 Panama bonds and the $100,000,000 3 per cent certificates authorized by order of the President of November 18, 1907, have been issued and to whom they have been awarded.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Texas to allow the resolution to lie over until a later period in the day, or perhaps until to-morrow.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senator from Iowa to the fact that this is merely a resolution of inquiry, a part of which already purports to have been answered through the public prints. I do not myself see any necessity that the resolution should go over on account of the absence of the chairman of the Committee on Finance. I ask the Senator if he will not agree that the resolution may now be considered? Personally I have no desire to debate it at this time, but I should like to have it adopted, it being merely an inquiry as to facts.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I do not know that there is any objection to the passage of the resolution. It may be that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] would like to modify the resolution in some respects; and as he will be here to-morrow morning, and possibly even before the close of the session to-day, I hope the Senator from Texas will permit the resolution to go over. There will be no great disturbance if the resolution is not acted on until to-morrow.

Mr. CULBERSON. There is, of course, no disposition to be in any sense, seemingly or otherwise, discourteous to the Senator from Rhode Island; and if it is insisted upon by the Senator from Iowa that the resolution shall go over to a later hour to-day, or, possibly, until to-morrow, I will consent to it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over.

NATIONAL BANK STATISTICS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate another resolution, submitted by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON], coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. CULBERSON on the 4th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate—

1. The total number of national banks in operation October 1, 1907, and November 18, 1907, in each State and Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and the aggregate capital stock and unimpaired surplus of such banks in each of said States and Territories and the District of Columbia at that time.

2. The total amount of public money on deposit in said banks in each of said States and Territories and the District of Columbia October 1, 1907, and November 18, 1907.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. What disposition does the Senator from Texas desire to have made of the resolution?

Mr. CULBERSON. Possibly the Senator from Iowa will be glad to have that resolution adopted now.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator to allow the resolution to go over with the other.

Mr. CULBERSON. At the request of the Senator from Iowa, I am willing that the resolution shall go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over.

ISSUE OF BONDS AND CERTIFICATES.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, inasmuch as the resolution offered by me, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the Senate of the amount of Panama bonds and 3 per cent certificates which have been awarded and to whom, has been passed over, I ask leave to modify it in the particulars which I send forward to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Texas proposes to modify the resolution submitted by him by inserting a substitute for it, which will be read.

The Secretary read the substitute resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to furnish the Senate with an abstract of the proposals received by him for the Panama bonds and 3 per cent certificates, authorized by order of the President November 18, 1907, and to inform the Senate what amount of the issue of said bonds and said 3 per cent certificates have been issued and to whom they have been awarded.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be so modified, and as modified will be printed and lie over.

PROPOSED DRAINAGE INVESTIGATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution, submitted by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. LATIMER], coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. LATIMER on the 4th instant, as follows:

Whereas there is in the United States between fifty and one hundred million acres of swamp, tidal, and overflowed lands which are now, for lack of drainage, unproductive and a prolific source of malarial and other diseases, and the Secretary of Agriculture having for the past three years conducted drainage investigations in this country and abroad and has accumulated a large amount of valuable data on the subject: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of Agriculture be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to prepare and submit to the Senate on or before March 1, 1908, a report on drainage, to include the following:

First. The location and area of lands in the United States that are swamp and overflowed and susceptible of being drained and made fit for agriculture.

Second. The effect of drainage on such land and on the public health and upon agriculture.

Third. The area of land which has been drained under the laws of the different States and the benefits which have resulted therefrom.

Fourth. The summary of the legislation of the different States and of the legal and business methods under which drainage works have been constructed and maintained.

Fifth. A review of the drainage laws and policies of the leading agricultural countries of Europe and their results.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, that appears to be rather a comprehensive resolution, and I suggest to the Senator offering it that he fix no date for the reply.

Mr. LATIMER. What was the suggestion of the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. ALLISON. Not later than the 1st of March, 1908, is fixed for the date of the reply to the Senator's resolution. It may turn out that this vast amount of information cannot be secured by that date. Therefore, I ask the Senator if he will not modify his resolution so as to make it read "at as early a day as practicable."

Mr. LATIMER. I will say to the Senator that, after conference with the Department which has this information in its possession, there will be no trouble on that account. They have not only the money to print the information desired, but they have the data at hand. A similar resolution was introduced at the last session of Congress, and the Department, thinking it would be passed at that time, had prepared the data referred to in the resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. Then, Mr. President, there will be no harm in striking out the date named in the resolution and substituting "at as early a date as practicable."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed to the resolution by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out the words "on or before March 1, 1908," and insert "at as early a day as practicable."

Mr. LATIMER. I have no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KEAN. I suggest to the Senator from South Carolina that he also strike out the preamble to the resolution, because the facts, when we get the information, may not coincide with the preamble.

Mr. LATIMER. I think there will be no trouble about that.

Mr. KEAN. I suggest that the preamble be stricken out.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. KEAN] to strike out the preamble to the resolution.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest to the Senator from South Carolina that in the second subdivision of the resolution the word "land" should be "lands." It should be plural to conform to the first subdivision.

Mr. LATIMER. That is correct.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 8, page 1 of the resolution, after the word "such," it is proposed to strike out the word "land" and insert "lands."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. In the same subdivision, line 9, I move to strike out the word "upon," before the word "agriculture." I think the Senator will agree to that.

Mr. LATIMER. Certainly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER].

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution, submitted by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. CLAY], coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. CLAY on the 4th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, directed to report to the Senate the name and location of each and every national bank designated as a United States depository, together with the total amount of money deposited in each of said banks by the United States during the year 1907.

He is also directed to report the total amount of money deposited in each of said banks by States at the present time; also the bonded indebtedness of the United States, the rate of interest said indebtedness bears, and he is directed to report what amount of said indebtedness the United States is at liberty to pay off before maturity and the amount of surplus in the Treasury of the United States, which shall include the amount of cash now on hand and the amount deposited in national banks.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution which has just been read.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Georgia to allow the resolution to go over.

Mr. CLAY. I would ask the Senator from Iowa if he wants the resolution to go over on account of the absence of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH]?

Mr. ALLISON. Well, Mr. President, I think that it is only courteous to the chairman of the Committee on Finance to allow the resolution to go over for to-day. As I have heretofore stated, the Senator from Rhode Island will be here to-morrow.

Mr. CLAY. That is satisfactory, Mr. President, and I consent that the resolution may go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. KEAN. If there be no further morning business, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After ten minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened and (at 1 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, December 10, 1907, at 12 o'clock meridian.
